Farley Plans Stump Tour Of the South Next Week

Itinerary Includes Hull's Own Ground; Ickes Insists Only Roosevelt Can Win

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

With third-term bridges burned behind him, Postmaster General James A. Farley yesterday mapped plans for an extensive Southern tour beginning next week and linking his name once again with talk of a Hull-Farley ticket.

Billed as a routine nonpolitical round of postoffice dedications and addresses, the itinerary includes several stops in Tennessee and North Carolina, strong Hull territory, and speeches in half a dozen other Southern States.

White House silence and ill-concealed joy in the ranks of other Democratic candidates followed in the wake of Farley's unconditional announcement for the Democratic nomination, but leaders of the third-term movement asserted their drive to draft Roosevelt would continue.

Ickes for Roosevelt Only

Secretary of Interior Ickes, a spearhead of the movement, declared liberals would continue to work for the renomination of the President regardless of all other candidates.

Ickes said no Democratic candidate now in the field could control enough delegates to win the nomination, and he included in his list Farley, Vice President Garner and Federal Security Administrator McNutt.

Asked if the Democratic National convention in his opinion would draft Roosevelt, the Interior Secretary replied:

"You might want a girl to marry you, but that is no assurance she would have you."

Concerning Farley's unqualified announcement for the nomination, he said "every American citizen has that right, and Farley is a fine man."

Recalling Ickes' former statement that McNutt could not get liberal support if nominated, reporters asked if he thought the same applied to Farley. He would not comment.

He'll "Do the Right Thing"

"Jim Farley can be depended on to do the right thing," he replied, when asked if Farley, because of his candidacy, should retire as chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Friends of the Postmaster General meanwhile were confident that he had no intention of resigning as Democratic chairman before the national convention and that he would leave the Cabinet only at the President's behest. Ouster of Farley from the Cabinet, it was pointed out, would be interpreted as meaning the President intended to run.

Entry of Farley into the race, without any strings, was welcomed by supporters of all other Democratic candidates, active or otherwise, as a serious check to the draft movement and clearing the field for an open race. But none other except Vice President Garner, first to declare, showed any disposition similarly to challenge the third termers in advance of a statement from the President. One prominent Democratic Senator ventured: "The third term boat is torpedoed."

Local Chiefs to Be Visited

Despite the official nature of Farley's forthcoming Southern tour, observers pointed out that Farley throughout the trip would keep closely in touch with Democratic State leaders, and can easily demonstrate a strong friendly following in territory allegedly opposed to his religious beliefs.

Typical of his Southern stops will be his April 1 arrival in Columbia, Tenn., to dedicate a new Federal

'It Couldn't Happen'

GEORGE HILTON WILSON

Tragedy Bewilders Wife and Superiors In District Office

By Lucia Giddens.

Still bewildered at the combination of circumstances that brought about the death of her husband, Mrs. George Hilton Wilson last night said simply: "It just wasn't the sort of thing that could happen to him."

Wilson, 36, chief accountant for the District Public Utilities Commission, hanged himself in a police cell at the Ninth Precinct Station yesterday, after having been charged with being intoxicated.

It wasn't like him even to take a drink, his wife said last night. A neighbor added: "Why, I've never known him to take anything stronger than a glass of wine, even when he was in a crowd."

Praised by Superior

Officials of the District Building likewise were shocked upon hearing of Wilson's death. His superior, Riley E. Elgen, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, described Wilson as a "brilliant accountant," and one of the best he had ever known. He said the man had worked until near midnight on a statistical report for Chairman Caldwell of the House subcommittee on Distcit Appropriations. He said he never had been known to take a drink.

At her home, 910 Crescent drive, Beverley Hills, near Alexandria, Va., Mrs. Wilson spoke of her last conversation with him—little more than two hours before he was arrested.

It wasn't unusual for him to stay late at his work, which kept him in Washington Wednesday night. Tuesday, too, he had worked till past midnight but had driven home afterwards. However, late Wednesday night, he telephoned his wife from his office and said he was so tired, he thought he would stay in town at a hotel, she said.

Said He Was Restless

"I telephoned him around 1:30 a. m. yesterday at the hotel to see if he had finished with his work. He told me that he was very restless, but he didn't say anything to alarm me. I knew he had been working hard and that he was a little nervous and highstrung, but I didn't see any reason to worry. I went on to sleep after my telephone conversation with him," Mrs. Wilson said.

At 3:50 a. m. he was arrested after a hotel manager had said he was creating a disturbance. At 5:42 a. m. he was discovered dead. At 7 a. m. Mrs. Wilson was notified by police who came to her home.

Wilson was said to have been seen in a restaurant with two men in the

Dope Traffic Here Is Cut To Trickle

Stern Enforcement Has Driven Drug Peddlers to Cover, Anslinger Reports

A dope peddler's paradise until recent months, Washington is now one of the worst risks in the country as a market for drugs in the illicit traffic.

The Post, which last November published a series of articles showing how low sentences, slow-moving justice and lavish use of probation had been accompanied by an alarming rise in narcotic cases, yesterday made a check-up which revealed:

That the District has become a "tight spot" for peddlers.

That its former status as a haven and soft spot for dope traffickers has been changed, in a matter of only four months, to that of a place so feared by these lawbreakers that many have left town or gone out of business and the remainder are adulterating their heroin to 1 and 2 per cent proportions.

That, in the words of Commissioner H. J. Ansliger, of the Bureau of Narcotics, "Washington is drying up for the peddler."

Stern Sentences Responsible

What appears to be little short of a miracle, this sudden "drying up" of a problem which was one of the most serious ever faced by local law enforcement officers, is simply the result of the courts' adoption of a sterner attitude toward offenders, according to officials interviewed yesterday.

They were united in declaring that more adequate sentences, swift procedure in bringing offenders to justice and restricted application of probation are unquestionably responsible for the dope traffic being brought under control.

George E. McNeil, Assistant United States Attorney in charge of narcotics prosecutions, said:

"An inhabited alley which used to be a drug center is cleaned up. The big peddlers are in jail and the one who was placed on probation a few months ago is behaving himself, as far as we can tell. (Until recently it was not uncommon for violators out on bond or probation to resume peddling operations.)

Cases Move Faster

"Cases are moving faster through the courts and the law enforcement agents have curtailed the flow of illicit drugs so that the situation is far better than it was a few months ago."

Last fall, before The Post called attention to the Capital's unenviable reputation as a soft spot for narcotics vendors, sentences of 6 months, a year and 18 months were being meted out for offenses which were treated twice or three times as severely by Federal judges in their jurisdictions.

In contrast, two-year minimum sentences are now becoming frequent and, in cases where a defendant is found guilty on several counts or indictments, the serving of consecutive terms is being prescribed by the court more often than formerly.

One peddler was sentenced this month to two to five years in one case and two to three years in another, the terms consecutive, not concurrent. Another violator got two to four years in one case, one to three years in another—also consecutive.

Both of these drug sellers were sentenced by Justice Peyton Gordon. Another defendant to come before Justice Gordon this month received "two to five" and two to four years was his verdict for another.

Jones Farm Bill Pawnshop Idea, Goss Asserts

Tells Committee It Would Kill Incentive To Repay Loans

Act on Crop Surplus

THE SENATE yesterday voted into the farm bill an appropriation of $85,000,000 for surplus crop removal, but adjourned until today without acting on final passages.—Page 5.

Stock Plan Upheld

The Jones farm lending bill would lead to "a form of pawnshop credit," Albert S. Goss, former Land Bank commissioner, asserted yesterday before the House Agriculture Committee.

Goss contended that the bill, which forbids deficiency judgments against Land Bank borrowers, "destroys the principle of personal responsibility, which underlies all sound credit policies."

The former commissioner said the cooperative feature of the farm credit system would be abolished by the provision of the Jones measure which frees borrowers from the obligation to take 5 per cent of their loans in Land Bank stock.

Against Freezing Credit Rates

"Take the stock away," Goss said, "and the farmer has no interest in seeing that his neighbor repays his loan. It is no interest of his whether the system makes or loses money. He knows the Government will pay."

Growing Congressional interest in the farm credit issue was seen in the committee's decision to call Goss back for another hearing today. The former commissioner was cross-examined in two-hour sessions yesterday and Wednesday.

Goss maintained that the basis of successful operation for the Farm Credit Administration is "the normal value concept."

When farm income is below normal, leading agencies must make temporary arrangements to aid borrowers, Goss said, but he opposed setting up these remedial

Numbers Kings Beyond Reach, D. C. Police Say

Metropolitan police officers last night answered Justice Peyton Gordon's demand that "big shots" in the District numbers racket be brought into court by declaring that backers of the million-dollar policy game have been forced, through police action, out of the city into nearby Virginia and Maryland.

Justice Gordon tried to learn the identity of the men who control the gambling here when he was sentencing two men who pleaded guilty to violating lottery laws.

"I expect to see the backers and those who pay the bondsmen in this court in the near future if the enforcement officers do their duty," declared the justice.

A police assertion that "we know where ten large headquarters are in Prince Georges County," drew a quick response from State's Attorney H. Winship Wheatley, jr., of Prince Georges County.

"If they will give me the names of the officers who know where these places are I will be glad to issue summons for them to testify before the grand jury in April," declared Wheatley.

Allies Ask U. S. to Sell Latest Planes

Only Warcraft Now in Development Satisfy 1941 Needs, Says Buying Mission

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Allies, declaring they expect their heaviest aerial fighting to come in 1941, yesterday asked the United States to sell them its latest warplanes.

A formal request for the release of Army and Navy planes still in the development stage was filed with Secretary Morgenthau's aircraft coordinating committee by the British-French purchasing mission here. It was referred to the War and Navy departments for recommendation.

The mission, officials said, made it plain they do not want 1939-40 planes already released with which to combat the Nazis next year when they expect to need the fastest and most powerful craft available to meet the Germans' latest productions.

Roosevelt to Decide

President Roosevelt, who only 36 hours earlier strongly backed the foreign sale of our newest design aircraft as a means of expanding production facilities here, will pass on the Allies' request.

The request is likely to force a showdown on an issue that has been brewing in Administration circles for some time and which broke out in the open last week. According to persistent reports, Secretary Morgenthau has been at odds with Army officials over their refusal to approve release of their newest planes.

A week ago, revelation that the War Department had approved the foreign sale of the P-40 Curtiss pursuit started a Congressional investigation. Then Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson defended the release of the P-40, saying the Army had better ships under contract.

He declared it was the present policy of the Army and Navy not to release planes for export until more advanced models are under development. Six new types—two high-speed pursuits, two bombers, an attack-bomber, and a fast-climbing interceptor—are in this category and have not been released, Johnson stated.

President Favors Sale

At his press conference Tuesday, President Roosevelt spoke out on the plane issue. Congressional assertions that plane secrets were being given away he branded "bunk" and laid down Administration policy on aircraft exports. Plane designs are no secret, he declared, only certain aircraft devices which will not be released. To sell our planes abroad and thus expand the aircraft industry for defense reasons we must let them have what they will buy, the President declared.

Army officials, fearful that this announcement meant release of their latest designs, took refuge in Mr. Roosevelt's statement that each case would be considered on its merits. Yesterday's Allied mission request, it is said, includes virtually all of the types now withheld.

Meanwhile the annual report of the National Munitions Control Board, published by the State Department, showed arms exports to have expanded ninefold in the last three years.

Outgoing Machine Of Long Rushes 'Kingfish' Statue

Baton Rouge, La., March 21 (AP).—The repudiated Long political machine today left incoming "reform" forces a gaudy reminder of its past power by erecting a 14-foot statue of Huey P. Long over the grave of the slain "Kingfish" on the capitol lawn.

Workmen rushed into place the statue, which tops an elaborately carved 21-foot granite base.

The action was taken by Gov. Earl K. Long, who was cast aside by the electorate a month ago when Sam H. Jones was chosen Governor.

The dying administration recently drew for the first time on the $15,000 fund authorized for another statue of Long in Louisiana's niche in Statuary Hall in Washington.

Secretary of State Hull last night officially reprimanded the American Minister to Canada, James H. R. Cromwell, for the diplomat's anti-German, pro-Ally address at Toronto on Tuesday.

Amid a storm of controversy on Capitol Hill, with some members of Congress demanding the minister's recall and others praising him for his frankness, Hull wired Cromwell that his remarks "contravened standing instructions to American diplomatic officers," and asked that there be no repetition.

The envoy, husband of the former Doris Duke, heiress, was appointed minister only three months ago.

There was immediate speculation on whether he would resign, since he had been quoted Wednesday night that he would "stand pat" on the sentiments he had expressed and the propriety of a diplomatic representative expressing them.

In fact, in his Toronto talk he said it was the duty of a diplomat to tell

Chamber at Odds

By John Lloyd

Paris, March 21.—The cabinet Paul Reynaud created quickly to "push the war" for France headed immediately into trouble tonight, with some doubtful heads shaking in French parliamentary quarters on its chances of survival.

Acting rapidly to meet the demand that France be spared a lengthy period without a government, Reynaud, finance minister in Edouard Daladier's regime, put an end to the current cabinet crisis in a day, but fell short of satisfying the whole of French political opinion.

It was neither a small, compact government Reynaud produced nor a complete national union government to take in all parties from right to left.

Two Groups Stand Aside

The new cabinet has 22 ministers—three more than the Daladier government which resigned yesterday, and two powerful rightist groups are not cooperating.

Much of the parliamentary furore that brought on the fall of the Daladier government was for a small, wieldy cabinet.

A possible sop to this demand was Reynaud's creation within the cabinet of a "war committee" made up of himself, Camille Chautemps, who retains the vice premiership he held in the previous cabinet; former Premier Daladier, who remains minister of national defense; Georges Mandel, new minister of colonies; Lucien Lamoreux, new minister of finance, and Raoul Dautry, armaments minister.

This inner cabinet would meet several times a week.

Attitude Held in Reserve

The most mystifying development was a decision by Daladier's Radical Socialist Party, which has seven ministers in the new cabinet, to hold its attitude in reserve pending action by the Reynaud government.

In other words, the party which the previous night had issued a statement saying Daladier had its confidence "more now than ever" is not ready to pledge its unqualified vote to the government that supplanted Daladier's.

[P. J. Philip, New York Times Paris correspondent, reported last night that Daladier's forced resignation and the consequent creation of the Reynaud cabinet was in large

London (Friday), March 22.—German undersea raiders, mines and bombing planes have taken 56 lives, including that of a woman passenger, since an intensive campaign against merchant shipping began Tuesday, it was disclosed early today.

They have sunk six ships, five of them neutral, in each case with loss of life, according to British accounts.

German claims to the sinking of nine warships and merchant vessels in a British convoy off Scapa Flow Wednesday were ridiculed by the British Admiralty. Four ships and a warship in the convoy were merely damaged, it was claimed.

One of the neutral victims, the Dutch tanker Phobos, was sunk by a mine off the southeast coast of England with a loss of six lives.

The British accounts indicated that submarines were more efficient than German bombers, especially

Chamberlain Party Members, Opposition Join in Criticism

London, March 21.—The most outspoken criticism of the government which has been voiced since the outbreak of the war was heard in the House of Commons this afternoon as Liberal and Conservative speakers joined in demanding more vigorous conduct of the war by a smaller war cabinet, composed of ministers free from departmental responsibility.

What critics of the Chamberlain government want now is what David Lloyd George gave the country after the early reverses of the last war. However, when the members dispersed for the Easter holidays there seemed little prospect that the prime minister would bow to them before Parliament reconvenes April 2, although parliamentary recesses in this country are a favorite time for reshuffling cabinets.

Uncle Sam Says He'll Spank if Nephews Use His Cars Privately

Despite objections of Secretary of Interior Ickes, the House Appropriations Committee yesterday revealed that it intended to crack down on Government departments and agencies that fail to put their names in conspicuous letters on their official automobiles.

The committee also took the occasion "to serve notice that the practice of using official cars for private business must be stopped at once." It declared that "certain officials" of various agencies "have not been disposed to regard seriously" a legal prohibition against use of Government cars for private purposes.

Without mentioning names, the committee warned that "an appropriate inquiry" will be made later on "to determine whether this admonition has been heeded." Illegal use of Government cars "tends to undermine respect" for Federal officials on the part both of the public and subordinate governmental employes, the committee said.

There was even a suggestion that official cars be done away with and officials be required to use taxis, which abound in Washington.

At least one Federal official, National Youth Administrator Aubrey Williams, admitted in hearings before an Appropriations subcommittee that he uses an NYA car for private business—but that he was the only employe in the agency to do so. Transcript of the hearings was released yesterday.

"The car takes me home frequently and frequently comes and gets me," Williams told the subcommittee on the appropriation bill for the Labor Department, FSA, NLRB and related agencies. "But that is the extent of it and

Wife Expecting Quintuplets Learns She'll Have One Child

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., March 21.—The Miami Herald said tonight Mrs. Emory Callahan, who expected to become the mother of quintuplets, actually would give birth to only one child.

Mrs. Callahan said yesterday—and her physician confirmed her hopes—that she expected to bear five children about two months hence. They based their statements on X-rays which were believed to show five distinct heads.

John S. Knight, publisher of The Herald, made the announcement that there would be only one child.

Earlier he had announced that the Herald would provide medical care for Mrs. Callahan in exchange for exclusive rights to her story and pictures.

"The cost of Mrs. Callahan's medical and hospital care will continue to be paid by the Herald just as though today's examination had supported the previous belief that she was to be the mother of quintuplets," Knight said.

The Herald said a physician arranged new X-rays today which showed only one embryo. The birth is expected some time in June.

The Callahans—center of the sensational story of an expected multiple birth that occurs only once in 57,000,000 times—took the news of their probable single child philosophically.

Tonight, the 22-year-old bride of eight months, returned to her home in one room of a small bungalow the Callahans share with two other couples. She and her 32-year-old husband said they were satisfied with one instead of the expected five—although they were just a little puzzled by the whole thing.

WELLES UNSCARED: Via the diplomatic grapevine word has filtered back that when Sumner Welles talked with Hitler, the Fuehrer, after a modulated overture, put on a bit of his well-known ranting and raving act calculated to frighten the American Under Secretary of State a little and impress him with Germany's ferocious "will-to-win."

* * * *

But Welles didn't scare worth a darn. He was interested in peace, not in gotterdammerung. He just looked on calmly.

The view is held here that one of the things discussed at the Hitler-Mussolini confab Monday was ways and means of inducing Welles to forget some of Hitler's bad acting, and to convice Welles that after a fashion Hitler may be willing to consider peace—his kind of a peace.

Labor Board Funds Slashed By Committee

House Group Lops $337,000, Urges End Of Research Division

By John E. Oakes.
Post Staff Writer

The hard-pressed National Labor Relations Board was subjected yesterday to an implied rebuke and a 1941 budget cut of $337,000 by the House Appropriations Committee.

Influence of the Smith committee hearings was evident as the House group recommended abolition of the board's division of economic research and strengthening of anti-lobbying legislation.

The appropriations committee's cut in labor board funds was part of a slash of nearly $12,000,000 below budget estimates in the gigantic appropriation bill covering the Labor Department, Federal Security Agency, NLRB, Employes Compensation Commission, National Mediation Board and Railroad Retirement Board. As reported out, the bill stands at $954,000,000, which is $19,000,000 less than expenditures for the current year.

Pay-Hour Funds Cut

The wage and hour division of the Labor Department, which, like the Labor Board, is strictly a New Deal agency, was cut $1,000,000 below 1941 budget estimates; but the sum approved, $5,000,000, is still over $1,500,000 in excess of the current appropriation.

In explaining the reduction below the President's recommendations for the wage and hour division, the committee touched on a highly controversial issue in suggesting that Congress amend the Wage-Hour Act "to clarify certain ambiguities in the existing law."

The committee retained the $85,000,000 budget estimate for the National Youth Administration and raised the figure for the Public Health Service by nearly $1,500,000 to $31,500,000, including an unbudgeted increase of $2,000,000 to fight veneral diseases.

Conciliators Praised

The Appropriations Committee lavished especial praise on the conciliation service of the Labor Department, declaring it to be "one of the most efficacious means devised for prompt and satisfactory settlement of labor difficulties."

The week's awards bring 1940 engineering awards to $397,723,000, or 19 per cent below the first 12 weeks of 1939. Private construction awards for the year to date, however, total $201,821,000, or 4 per cent more than in the same period last year. Comparisons follow:

William J. Collins Seeks Jim Preston's Record of Service

William J. Collins, superintendent of the Senate Press Gallery, known familiarly to Washington's newspapermen as "Willie," yesterday completed 31 years of continuous service at the Capitol.

"But I'm going after Jim Preston's record of 35 years," said Collins as he buckled down to start his thirty-second year.

Preston, whom he succeeded as superintendent, was afterward Senate librarian and now is press relations officer for the Archives Building.

"Willie" Collins, who conceals his age even from his associates, is a native Washingtonian who began his career in the gallery as a messenger. The previous year he made his debut on Capitol Hill as special manager of a press room in the Senate Office Building in 1909 during Payne-Aldrich tariff bill hearings.

Only Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith, of South Carolina, remains of the members of the Senate who were in office when "Willie" started working at the Capitol. Senator Borah, who died this year, preceded him on the Hill by two years.

Newspapermen covering Congress have changed during the last 30 years, Collins said, and have grown considerably in numbers. They're younger on the average than the correspondents of a generation ago.

The gallery list has grown from 176 to 531.

While leaving the heavier work to his assistants, "Willie" still presides at all important press conferences and expects to take over with Bill Donaldson, superintendent of the House press gallery, at the forthcoming party conventions.

The Gallup Poll

California in Democratic Column Today But Majority Is Less Than in 1936

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Third in a series on political complexion of key States as shown by American Institute of Public Opinion surveys. Previous articles reported political sentiment in New York and Pennsylvania.

Princeton, N. J., March 21.—Despite a sizable defection in Democratic Party strength in California since 1936, special studies of voting sentiment in the State indicate that California would have to be put down as reasonably safe for the Democrats at the present time. With the 1940 campaign only a few months off, a majority of the State's voters say they want the Democratic Party to win the Presidential election in November.

GALLUP

California's 22 electoral votes will be a rich political prize in the campaign and from present indications the Democratic Party will need all the votes it can get in the West to offset Republican strength in the East, where New York and Pennsylvania are closely divided in sentiment between the major parties today.

58% Favor Democrats

The California situation is shown in the replies to the following question which was put to a cross-section of the State's voters:

"Which party would you like to see win the Presidential election this year?"

California Voters

Want Republicans to Win...42

While this represents a comfortable margin for the Democrats, nevertheless their lead is far below the vote cast for Roosevelt in 1936. That year the President carried the Golden State with 68 per cent of the major party vote, or a full 10 points more than today's figure. Approximately one-fifth (22 per cent) of the 1936 Roosevelt voters in California now say they want to see the Republicans win the Presidency.

The War Influence

Whereas the war in Europe brought a sharp rise in the popularity of the Democratic Party and of President Roosevelt throughout the country, surprisingly enough this trend has not been apparent in California. In fact, the Democratic Party there is not so strong today as it was last July, before the war broke out.

An Institute survey study at that time found that 60 per cent wanted to see the Democrats win the election, as against 58 per cent today.

Third term sentiment in California is evenly divided today, with a slight majority favorable.

On the question, "If President Roosevelt runs for a third term will you vote for him?" the vote divides as follows:

Would Vote For..... 51%
Would Vote Against..... 49

In 1936 Roosevelt polled 1,766,836 votes in California. About one-fourth of these (27 per cent), the survey indicates, would not vote for him for a third term, while the remaining 73 per cent say they would.

Gen. Reckord Terms GAO 'High-Handed'

Guard Officers Forced To Resign, Senate Committee Told

By the Associated Press

The Senate Military Affairs Committee heard charges yesterday that the General Accounting Office and Comptroller General, in a "high-handed" and "un-American" manner, had forced the resignation of National Guard officers for technically poor bookkeeping.

Adj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, of Maryland, testified that the Accounting Office had been set up as a final authority so that not even intercession by the War Department could prevent the forcing out of disbursing officers when mere technical irregularities were found.

Reckord and Adj. Gen. E. A. Walsh, of Minnesota, urged a uniform accounting system for the Guard. Present law is such, they said, that the Accounting Office had been able to suspend payments of Federal funds for some infraction of regulations which had taken place 10 or 15 years previously.

Reckord said Col. William A. Taylor, disbursing officer for New York State from 1930 to 1937, had been "found guilty without a trial" by the accounting office and had been relieved from duty because payments of Federal funds were suspended.

"The comptroller general in all of these matters has acted in a very high-handed manner," Reckord asserted, adding, "I think it is utterly un-American."

Col. J. H. Spangler told the committee that he was forced out of office as a disbursing officer for Florida after the accounting office had sent a "flying squadron" into his State to check over his records.

Spangler said the squadron obtained affidavits that a woman restaurant owner, who was required to sign a voucher that she had furnished 111 meals to a traveling guard company, could not write. Spangler said that at a subsequent military court-martial it was disclosed that the woman's assistant had signed the voucher, that the meals had been furnised and tat proper payment was made.

He said he was exonerated by the court-martial but was forced to resign.

Retail Advertising Gains 5.7% in Week

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chicago, March 21.—With a total of 19,974,170 lines, retail display advertising in 80 cities reporting to Advertising Age was up 5.7 per cent over last year for the week ended March 9, the publication reported today.

The current total of 19,974,170 lines compares with 18,888,796 lines carried in the same cities during the corresponding week of 1939, the actual linage gain being almost 1,100,000 lines.

Bar Submits Corporation Law Changes

Encourage Formation Under D. C. Rules, Congress Urged

Proposed legislation to modernize the District's business corporation laws and increase its tax revenue has been sent to members of Congress by a special committee of the District of Columbia Bar Association, it was learned last night.

The suggested measure, said Camden R. McAtee, chairman of the committee, would "substantially increase" local revenue by enticing Washington business concerns to incorporate under District laws instead of those of other jurisdictions.

Of about 22,000 business corporations operating in the District, said McAtee, only about 2,000 are formed under present local corporation laws.

Principals Not New

"For five years," McAtee declared, "the District Bar Association and other interests have sought to modernize local laws governing business corporations, without success. The present bill is essentially the same as others previously sent to Congress—expressing principles and practices approved and adopted by other jurisdictions and seeking to make local incorporation attractive to business men."

He said the annual incorporation charge would be no greater than that now paid by local concensus under other State laws—$50.

Drafts Sent to King, Nichols

Drafts of the proposed measure have been sent to Senator King and Representative Nichols, chairmen of the Congressional District committees. Corporation Counsel Seal also has been asked to study the bill with a view to submitting recommendations to the Commissioners.

The special bar committee includes Harry H. Bettleman, Thomas F. Burke, S. Wallace Dempsey, George C. Gertman, Charles D. Hayes, Arthur J. Hilland, Lawrence Koenigsberger, Robert E. Lynch, Joseph A. Rafferty, Maurice D. Rosenberg, Everett Sanders, Milford F. Schwartz, Joseph P. Tumulty, Joseph P. Tumulty, jr.; H. Winship Wheatley, jr., and Rudolph H. Yeatman, jr.

Miami Beach, Fla., March 21 (AP).—Al Capone was at home on his Palm Island estate tonight but still was under the care of a physician.

The former gangster's presence was confirmed by his brother, John Capone.

It had been expected Capone would have to register with local police, but attorneys advised Sheriff D. C. Coleman that the law requiring registration of felons did not cover those convicted of income tax evasions.

evening, but the charge of intoxication still puzzles Mrs. Wilson.

"He had pride—and I suppose when he realized later on where he was, the thought it would be a terrible disgrace, and he started to brood over it," Mrs. Wilson said.

"He often worked late, because he was so interested in his work. He poured himself into it. Sometimes he would bring work home with him. He was a bookworm," she added. "He worked hard because he wanted to, not because he was driven to it."

"No, we hadn't planned anything special for Easter. Of course we were going to church—he was a steward in the Beverley Hills Community Church. But I suppose he would have had some work to do, even on Easter," she said.

Blood Test Ordered

Mrs. Wilson, slim and blue-eyed, spoke calmly but with great effort. "I suppose I'll realize it tomorrow, or next day or next week . . ."

Formerly Ida Nielsen, of Iowa, she was at one time employe of the Civil Service Commission here. She married Wilson six years ago.

As she spoke, their year-and-a-half-old son, Wayne, lay asleep upstairs.

"Something must have snapped—to cause him to do a thing like that," she said.

Although Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, issued a certificate of suicide, he ordered a blood test to complete his investigation after learning Wilson was not known to drink.

Besides his wife and son, he leaves his father, Lee R. Wilson, associate accountant and auditor of the Federal Power Commission. His father, who is stsationed in the field, maintains his home at 1238 Franklin street northeast.

Wilson went to the commission as an accountant in 1931. Three years later he went to the West Virginia public service commission, but returned here in 1937. He was appointed chief accountant last fall.

His body is at the Lee funeral home, Fourth street and Massachusetts avenue northwest, where services will be held Saturday.

Dr. Marvin Flees as Low Down On Earth Goes Over His Head

George Washington President Frightened Away From Conference on Theoretical Physics When Talk Gets Too Deep for Him

Theoretical physicists gathered here yesterday to exchange theories about the center of the earth. But the theories were so uncertain that they theorized about theories instead of the center of the earth.

These were no ordinary scientists. One was a Nobel Prize winner and they all understand Einstein's theory of relativity. They were physicists from all over the country gathered for the opening of the sixth three-day Washington Conference on Theoretical Physics at Carnegie Institution and George Washington University.

Their discussion soared so high into the realm of high speculation that even Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington, gave up in dismay, put on his coat, and left.

"I don't know what it is all about," he confessed. "But after all, a college president is a man who knows something about everything and nothing about anything."

The scientists who frightened Dr. Marvin away with talk of the center of the earth are not really interested in the center of the earth, they told this reporter.

They are studying the atom and its nucleus. They seek to discover the laws that govern the action of atomic particles. To do this they must study atoms under extremely high temperatures and pressures. These cannot be produced by man. But they exist at the center of the earth.

Although the scientists can never hope to get there, the center of the earth is their laboratory.

They speculate about the conditions in their "laboratory," then they guess about the chemical composition of the substance there, then they speculate on what happens to the hypothetical substance under the hypothetical conditions. From this data they theorize about atoms they can never hope to see, and are not sure exist.

"What's the use of all this?" a reporter asked Enrico Fermi, Nobel Prize winner, who discovered the element listed ninety-third on the atomic scale.

"Well, I don't know," said the scientist who has taught at Columbia University since he came from Italy last year. "We want to know about these things, to find out what we can. I can't see any immediate application, of course, but . . ."

The wiry Roman fingered a midget slide rule in his coat pocket, ran his fingers through his fast-thinning black hair, and added:

"It's pure science. After all, a lot of people speculate about the stars. This is the same thing."

Schulte Backs Sefton Darr For Allen Job

Congressman's Choice Has Pressed Plea Of D. C. for Suffrage

Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, last night said he would support Sefton Darr, former president of the District Bar Association, to succeed Commissioner George E. Allen.

Citizen spokesmen renewed their plea for a bona fide Washington resident to succeed the Commissioner, who leaves the District government on April 15.

Friends of the former bar association president, also have approached influential members of the Senate to gain support for their candidate.

Advocate of Suffrage

Representative Schulte said Darr is "an excellent man for the job." At recent hearings on District reorganization, Darr made vigorous pleas for local suffrage.

Kenneth P. Armstrong, treasurer of the Federation of Citizens' Associations, added his name to those favoring a bona fide resident, adding "he should be one who has been active in civic affairs."

"What is more, the new appointee should favor self-government for the District," he said.

Wants Progressive

John Locher, whose name has been mentioned as a candidate, yesterday said the new commissioner should not only have been a "lifelong" resident but a "progressive" as well.

Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland-District Industrial Council, said he favored a man from the ranks of labor.

"He should also be a suffrage advocate," Katz added.

There are no indications from the White House when the President will name a successor. Allen said he might confer with President Roosevelt" in the near future."

School Closings Change Citizens', Play Unit's Plans

The Board of Education's statement issued Wednesday that all school buildings will be closed to public use from today until April 1 has necessitated a change of plans for Washington citizens associations and the annual one-act play tournament.

Committee members of the tournament said last night that the plays previously announced for production in Roosevelt High School auditorium Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday of next week would be postponed. Notice of the new dates will be made Sunday.

The Burrough Citizens Association, which regularly meets the fourth Friday of each month at the Burroughs School, will meet at 8 p. m. today at the Twelfth Precinct station, Seventeenth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast. The regular meeting of the Anacostia Citizens Association will be postponed until April 2 at the Anacostia Junior and Senior High School.

Giannini Bank May Receive RFC Loan

Agency Would Lend 30 Millions to Be Paid From Stock Issue

Jesse H. Jones, Federal Loan Administrator, said yesterday that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation probably would authorize a loan to Bank of America, large Giannini-controlled bank, to enable the bank to build up its capital as directed by the Comptroller of the Currency.

The RFC, he declared, stands ready to lend the bank all or part of the $30,000,000 of new capital which it is required to raise.

He indicated that the loan commitments probably would be made against preferred stock issued by the bank. Interest on such loans, he said, is 3½ per cent. Such an arrangement would permit the bank to sell the stock publicly when market conditions appeared most favorable and apply the proceeds to retirement of the loan.

Bank of America has not formally asked for the money, Jones said, but officials discussed tentatively the matter of a loan during the course of recent negotiations with the Comptroller of the Currency.

A capital increase of $30,000,000 was the main point in an agreement entered into between the bank and the Comptroller. This agreement resolved a controversy which had continued over a period of years.

Jones announced that the RFC had agreed to lend the Great Northern Railway $20,000,000 to finance the greater part of a $28,132,000 St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway bond maturity which falls due next July 1. The Great Northern Railroad will pay off the remaining $8,132,000 in cash.

Federal Officials Question Two on Race Wire Service

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 21.—John Patton, a race track executive, and Col. Abe Hallow were questioned today by Federal officials directing an investigation of race wire services.

The men, served with subpenas in Florida, conferred with United States District Attorney William J. Campbell and Samuel Klaus, Special Assistant Attorney General, who has charge of the current Government campaign to eradicate turf service systems formed after the Nationwide news service was abandoned last fall. Neither of the prosecutors commented on the nature or results of the parley.

Patton was vice president of the Sportsman's Park track in suburban Cicero. The president, Edward J. O'Hare, was slain by assassins here last November. The killing has remained unsolved.

Dunigan Home Leased As Australian Legation

White Oaks, the 25-room home of Mrs. David J. Dunigan, at 3117 Woodland drive northwest, has been leased by Richard Gardiner Casey, the new Australian Minister, as the legation, it was announced yesterday.

The Minister and his staff expect to move in early next month.

U. S. Asks Court to Forbid Dairy Agreement Exemptions

Exemption from local dairies from regulation under the Washington Milk Market Agreement would produce "unstable and disorderly conditions" and thwart "the declared policy of Congress," the Department of Agriculture counsel told the District Court yesterday.

The Holbrook Farms Dairy, Brentwood, Md., which now enjoys immunity from regulation by reason of a temporary injunction issued by Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat of the District Court, has asked that this order be made permanent. The department opposes the dairy's action.

The department's contentions were advanced in an answer filed by Edward Knuff and John S. L. Yost, special assistants to the Attorney General. The dairy won its temporary immunity after its attorney, Sefton Darr, argued that to make the dairy pay farmers the prices provided in the agreement would be ruinous and would be an unconstitutional taking of property. Wheat held that Congress had no power to provide regulation of a strictly local business, not interstate in character.

The department's reply yesterday was that "unless all milk sold in the Maryland portion of the (Washington) marketing area, including that milk the handling of which is purely intrastate in character, is subject to the regulation, the milk which has moved in interstate commerce subject to the regulation will be unable to compete with the unregulated milk distributed in the Maryland portion of the marketing area."

District Girl's Husband Killed In Alaska Crash

Details of the Alaskan air crash in which Larry Larson, 34, famed Arctic mercy flier, was killed Wednesday were anxiously awaited last night at the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Arthur H. Kimball, 2802 Wisconsin avenue northwest.

First report of the mishap came from her daughter, Mrs. Ruth Howland Kimball Larson, the flier's wife, Mrs. Kimball added. The couple was married at the Church of Epiphany here two years ago.

At the time of her marriage, Mrs. Larson was a teacher in the District public schools. She has flown many miles over Alaska wastes with her husband and at Christmas time flew with him from Washington to Florida after a visit to her mother.

Clash Blamed As Dr. Snead Quits SSB

Advocates of Separating Job Placement Work Nearly All Gone

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

A clash in theory as to how Federal job placement work should be handled lies back of the resignation of Dr. William H. Stead as assistant director of the Social Security Board's Bureau of Employment Security, it was learned yesterday.

Dr. Stead has been appointed dean of the school of business and public administration of Washington University, at St. Louis. He will leave the bureau June 30.

His resignation signifies virtual completion of the gradual absorption of the former United States Employment Service by the unemployment division of the Social Security Board. In the reshuffling of Federal agencies which went into effect last June 30, the service was transferred, after a long controversy, to the board's unemployment insurance division.

Was Made Assistant

The combined agencies were given the name of the Bureau of Employment Security. Dr. Stead, who came over as head of the Employment Service, received the title of assistant director for employment service of the new bureau.

Since the transfer, however, top officials of the old Employment Service have gradually resigned or moved to other Federal agencies. They have been replaced by insurance-minded experts.

Besides Dr. Stead, those who have resigned include James E. Dodson, the chief fiscal officer, who went with the Labor Department Wage-Hour Division, and Edgar B. Young, head of the personnel section, who transferred to the Budget Bureau. C. E. Lamson, director of the District of Columbia Employment Service, took a job as personnel officer for the Bonneville Dam Administration.

The controversy, it is said, was responsible for the resignation of W. Frank Persons as director of the Employment Service more than a year ago. Walter Burr, his assistant, left about the same time and for the same reason.

Held Functions Separate

These officials, it is said, felt that the task of finding jobs for unemployed persons was essentially a separate function from the administrative work associated with unemployment compensation.

Dr. Stead, it is said, was the leader of the separation theory. He is believed to have continued in his job in the hope that this theory would prevail.

Last fall veterans' organizations, the American Federation of Labor, the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the Associated General Contractors of America, and one or two other organizations started agitation for return of the Employment Service to the Labor Department. But their efforts were not coordinated and did not succeed.

Sugar Payment Fight Delays Farm Measure

Senate Approves $85,000,000 for Surplus Removal

By the Associated Press

With economy advocates in full retreat, the Senate yesterday advanced the billion-dollar farm bill almost to the point of passage, but then became snarled in a dispute over sugar payments and recessed until today.

The chamber approved, one after another, increases its Appropriation Committee had made in the House bill. To the unusual accompaniment of a unanimous roll call vote, it indorsed $85,000,000 for the removal of farm surpluses through distribution to the needy and through export subsidies.

It also voted to direct the RFC to make $40,000,000 of loans to the Rural Electrification Administration, and approved a provision for $50,000,000 in loans to help farm tenants acquire farms of their own.

These loans are in addition to the $922,000,000 of appropriations contained in the bill. The latter figure includes $212,000,000 to make "parity" payments—a purpose for which the House had voted nothing.

The parity payments were approved Wednesday. The increases—despite some decreases—boost the Senate's farm appropriation more than $200,000,000 above that of the House measure.

Toward the close of the day, Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, sought to place in the bill an amendment providing that Louisiana sugar growers who increased their acreage while quotas were suspended last year should not be deprived of benefit payments. A recess halted a resultant dispute.

The $40,000,000 loan item for extending rural electric lines caused an acrid exchange between Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, and Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, with numerous Democrats aiding Norris.

"As far as I know, not a single REA cooperative is meeting its expenses and interest payments from earnings," Taft said, while urging that REA funds should be appropriated rather than loaned.

"This es an excellent thing, but it actually is spending and not lending," the Ohio Republican said.

Jones Bill Called A 'Pawnshop Plan'

measures as part of a long-term policy.

"The effect of writing into law an adjustment of interest rates, based on present values, is to tell agriculture it can never again get credit based on normal values, which means a lower standard of living," he told the committee.

Farm loan interest rates are lowered from 3½ and 4 per cent to 3 per cent in the Jones bill. Goss estimated that the reduction in interest on land bank and commissioner loans would amount to approximately $16,000,000 a year.

Goss was subjected to sharp questioning by Democratic committee members. Representative Hampton P. Fulmer (Democrat), of South Carolina, told Goss:

"If the Farm Credit Administration had been making all the adjustments you say they did, you wouldn't have had to close out 100,000 farmers since 1933."

Goss replied that there can be no solution of farm problems without "compensatory prices" for farm products, "even if there were no interest charged at all," he said.

The former commissioner described special measures taken by the land banks in 1938 and 1939, providing for suspended and variable interest payments, "standstill agreements," liberalized reamortization arrangements and lease and option contracts between the banks and former land owners. These measures have gone far, he said, to relieve the situation in areas of severe agricultural depression.

Representative Walter Pierce (Democrat), of Oregon, said the provision by which the farmer must take 5 per cent of his loan in land bank stock is "virtually a guarantee of his neighbor's loan . . . Most farmers write off that 5 per cent as a loss from the start."

The provision for "mutual dependence" is the strength of any cooperative system, Goss answered.

"You are just as wrong about that as you can be," Pierce said. "I think it has worked exactly the opposite."

Goss admitted, under questioning by Representative Fred Gilchrist (Republican), of Iowa, that the cooperative features of the present land bank system "work better on paper than in practice."

He said he had consistently advocated "a more representative form of government" for the land banks. He urged the division of each land bank district into about 12 advisory districts, which would hold conferences attended by all presidents of farm loan associations. The chairmen of the advisory districts should then form an advisory committee to meet with the land bank directors, he said.

Carelessness Seen as Ship Sinks at Pier

England-Bound Vessel Settles at Baltimore; Sabotage Discounted

Baltimore, March 21 (AP)—A one-time American troopship, reputed to be the world's largest cargo vessel, lay partly submerged at her pier in Baltimore Harbor today, her hold and engine-room flooded mysteriously as she took on freight for a cruise to England.

The freighter Panamanian, owned by Arnold Bernstein, refugee German-Jewish shipping magnate, became flooded while her crew slept early today and gradually settled at a 10-degree list on the muddy harbor bottom. Her superstructure and part of the hull remained above water.

Reports of sabotage were denied by C. F. Smith, an official of the Baltimore Ocean Transportation Co., local agents for the vessel, which was to have sailed tomorrow.

Smith said the ship had been so heavily loaded that the flood tide was unable to lift her and when the tide went out, she settled. Other sources suggested the water might have come in through an open port or a cracked seam.

In New York, officials of the Bernstein Line—the Compania Transalantic Centro Americana—said sabotage was "very possible," but added that carelessness in refueling was a more probable cause of the flooding.

The Panamanian, formerly the troopship Mongolia, which sank a German U-boat with the first American shot fired in the World War, has a 27,000-ton displacement and was taking on a capacity 15,000-ton general cargo, including starch and glucose.

She has been loaded with all but 800 tons of the cargo, and the crew had planned to move her to deeper water today to finish the job. She was drawing 34 feet 6 inches.

Cox Threatens 'Washing Out' For SEC in Attack on Agency

New York Curb Exchange President Urges Harvard Business School Alumni To Seek Review of Security Laws

By the Associated Press

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, accused the Securities Commission in the House yesterday of "rapidly falling to the low level of the National Labor Relations Board."

"Unless its behavior is quickly improved," the Georgian warned, "it will undergo the kind of washing out that awaits the board."

Cox, who was one of the instigators of the current House investigation of the labor board, told newsmen his remarks about the SEC were preliminary to charges he intends to make when the Logan-Walter bill, designed to provide for judicial review of orders and decisions of administrative agencies, reaches the House floor.

Unless the SEC mends its ways, Cox told the House, "its high reputation made under the chairmanship of Joe Kennedy will not save it."

New York, March 21 (AP).—George P. Rea, president of the New York Curb Exchange, today urged alumni of the Harvard School of Business to ask their Congressmen to "review" the Nation's security laws, contending the national unemployment problem "will not be solved" until "the retarding influence of these laws on business and finance has been alleviated."

Rea, at a luncheon, said:

"If you believe that the securities acts might in the public interest be revoked, speak to your Representatives and Senators and ask them to listen to the many who urge constructive changes."

Rea said specific parts of the Securities Exchange Act "have contributed to the unhealthy thinness of financial markets and deterred investment in private enterprise."

He scored the "antimanipulation section" of the law, declaring "it is so vague that it beclouds many transactions with uncertainty because of the difficulty of knowing just what is outlawed."

The section aimed at unfair uses of information in the market by so-called "insiders," he added, "imposes a liability which bears scant relationship to the evil it seeks to prevent."

"The bare facts of purchase and sale or of sale and purchase of a security, with the resulting profit, are made the basis for liability," he said.

Currently preventing "a free flow of funds into industry and consequently the creation of new jobs," said Rea, are (1) the war (2) the feeling among investors that the Government is "unsympathetic" to the continuation and development of our system of private finance, (3) the income tax and its features governing capital gains and losses, and (4) the thin security markets.

Welles Thanks Duce, Ciano For Cordiality

Third Similar Message Sent; Apparently None Given Germans

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, March 21.—Before leaving, Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles sent a message to Count Ciano, Italian foreign minister, in which he expressed his appreciation for the courtesies shown him by King Victor Emmanuel, Premier Mussolini and Ciano himself. The message, which was prominently displayed today by all Rome newspapers, said:

"I beg your excellency to convey to the August Sovereign my profound appreciation for the audience he has kindly granted me. I also wish to express, once again, my deep gratitude for the cordial and friendly welcome given me by the Italian government and for the opportunity granted me during the conversations with His Excellency, the head of the government, and with yourself, to have the information which I shall be privileged to communicate to the President of the United States.

"In conveying to you, Your Excellency, the assurance of my highest consideration, I, likewise, send you the expression of my warm and personal esteem."

This was the third message of thanks sent by Welles during his trip. It was noted that former Premier Daladier and Prime Minister Chamberlain received similar cordial expressions, but as far as is known, nothong has been received by the German government, or, if received, no announcement was made at the time.

since the British have equipped their Hurricanes and Spitfires with cannon to penetrate and destroy the self-sealing gas tanks with which Heinkel bombers are equipped.

5 Dies on Danish Ship

No ships at all were sunk, though some were damaged, in the Scapa Flow convoy attack, the admiralty stated.

The Danish motorship Algier, 1,654 tons, was torpedoed without warning and sank in three minutes today, drowning four members of its crew and a woman passenger. Twenty others jumped overboard and clambered into a lifeboat in which they drifted ten hours before landing at a north British port.

It was revealed that in addition to their attack on a convoy off Scapa Flow yesterday, German planes were extremely active off the south coast last night and were engaged by British fighters. One of their victims was the British steamer Barn Hill, 5,439 tons, whose chief officer and chief steward were among the four killed when a German bomb scored a direct hit. The vessel's captain was the famous "Potato" Jones, noted for his exploits in running the Bilbao blockade during the Spanish civil war.

Thirty seamen were believed lost in the torpedoing within ten minutes of two Danish vessels, the Bothal, 2,190 tons, and the Viking, 1,153 tons, off the east coast of Scotland. Seven survivors were brought to land today.

In addition, it was announced tonight that 11 members of the crew of the Danish steamer Minsk, 1,229 tons, were missing after it sank in three minutes Tuesday night off the northeast coast of Scotland. A U-boat was blamed by nine members of the crew who were landed by warship at a Scottish port today after 36 hours in a small boat. Five were taken to hospitals.

ICC Authorizes $1,500,000 Issue

By the Associated Press

The Interstate Commerce Commission authorized the Louisiana & Arkansas Railway yesterday to issue and sell to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation at par $1,500,000 of equipment trust certificates in connection with the purchase of equipment costing $1,512,203.

The equipment includes 300 50-ton box cars, 255 70-ton flat cars, and seven used oilburning freight locomotives, and one used switching locomotive. The flat cars were purchased in February, 1938, and the company will use $267,945 to pay off the amount still due on them.

In authorizing the RFC loan, the commission found the Louisiana & Arkansas not to be in need of financial reorganization. Such a finding is necessary before a loan can be authorized.

Ile de France Starts Engines, May Put to Sea

Liner Queen Mary Follows Mauretania In Secret Dash

By International News Service

New York, March 21.—Smoke drifted across New York Harbor from the mammoth stacks of the French luxury liner Ile de France tonight as all signs indicated that she, too, would join the exodus of transatlantic vessels from the piers to which they been moored since early in the war.

Already far at sea are two Cunard-White Star craft, the new Mauretania and the Queen Mary, both bound for a destination yet unknown—possibly unknown even to their skippers—but believed heading north for a Canadian port, or south on the first leg of a voyage to Australia. In either event, it was believed they were destined to serve as transports for Colonial troops bound for war service in France or the Near East.

The Queen Mary slipped into the lower bay this morning only a few hours after the Mauretania had dropped below the horizon.

Seamen aboard the giant Queen Elizabeth, which successfully completed a secret dash from Scotland to New York two weeks ago, recalled that their skipper was in the dark on his destination until he opened secret orders of the British Admiralty.

Late today, the Queen Mary was reported seen off the New Jersey coast, leading to speculation she may be bound for Bermuda.

Meanwhile, the Ile de France took aboard her full crew of 300 men at her Staten Island pier and started her engines, believed preparatory to a night break for the sea and an unnamed French colony to bring new troops to the war.

Investors Syndicate Reports Assets Gain

Special Dispatch to The Post

Minneapolis, March 21.—Total resources of Investors Syndicate and its subsidiary companies, consolidated, amounted to $153,055,629, as of December 31, 1939, it was announced today by E. M. Richardson, vice president and treasurer.

The 1939 balance sheet indicates that at the year end, Investors Syndicate with its subsidiaries, held more than $62,000,000 in Federal Housing Administration insured mortgages on residential property throughout the United States.

"Of our 1939 loans, more than $20,000,000 went into new construction," Richardson said. "Building costs have advanced very little, and we anticipate a normal, healthy new construction during the current year."

New York, March 21.—The Utility Management Corporation reports that for the week ended March 15, net electric output of the Associated Gas and Electric group was 94,514,179 units. This is an increase of 9,093,656 units or 10.6 per cent above production of 85,420,523 units a year ago.

Japan Hints At Joint Action On Concessions

General's Statement Vague as to Date For Accomplishment

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Tokyo, March 21.—A hint that Japan might take joint action with the new Chinese government to terminate foreign concessions in China appeared in a statement by Maj. Gen. Akira Muto in Parliament today, but as usual it was vague regarding the date when this would be accomplished.

Answering Shinzo Imai, member of the Rightest group, Gen. Muto said the Japanese government had repeatedly declared that it would consider retrocession of foreign concessions as the construction of the new order progressed and that personally he thought Japan should translate its promise into action as soon as the new order had been accomplished.

Asked to assume that Japan might offer to return her concessions to China and that others might refuse, Gen. Muto replied:

"Japan and China should, in that case cooperate to bring about a really new order in east Asia. Suitable measures should be taken according to the circumstances."

The answer, in effect, repeated what successive foreign ministers have said, namely, that Japan is ready to return concessions, but at the time and under conditions to be determined later.

Government Names Abolished

Copyright by New York Times

Nanking, March 21.—The most important resolution passed by the central political conference today abolished the names "North China Provisional Government" and "Central China Reformed Government," although abolition of the North China government does not mean complete dissolution of that body, since there is being formed a "North China political affairs commission."

Political affairs of the provisional government will be taken over at the order of the Japanese-controlled central government within the scope provided, and its laws and decrees will be readjusted as soon as possible by the North China political affairs commission. A clear cut definition of these political affairs has not been given, although it is generally believed that North China will remain autonomous to the extent of handling problems pertaining to North China, the central government dictating the foreign policy and relations with Japan.

Nordics Begin Vacations On Glum Note

Russian Warning On Defense Treaty, Ship Losses Alarming

By Harold Callender.

Copyright by New York Times

Oslo, Norway, March 21.—As a large part of the population of Norway and Sweden went out with skiis today for a four or five day Easter vacation ominous news from both east and west obtruded upon the holiday mood.

From Moscow came reports that the Russians on second thought had decided to be rather more generous to themselves in fixing Finland's new frontiers—thus indicating that their objection to a northern defense pact to protect Finland was not merely academic.

From Britain came the news that two Norwegian and one Swedish ship had been sunk by German aircraft while traveling in British convoy—a severe blow for Norwegian seamen and shipping men who had until now believed their vessels were practically immune from attacks if guarded by British warships.

The news from the east seemed to confirm the apprehension aroused yesterday regarding the security of the eastern frontiers of Scandinavia while the news from the west seemed to deepen the concern held for the safety of neutral shipping on the high seas the news from the east was particularly disquieting for Sweden whose eye is fastened upon the Finnish-Russian frontier as if it were her own.

The news from the west touched Norway at a sensitive point since her large merchant fleet occupies a conspicuous and hazardous position among the shipping of the world. Thus Scandinavia seemed to be threatened again from two sides at once.

Few now have many illusions or hopes regarding Russia. Events tend to shake the faith of those who only a few days ago argued that Russia had got what she wanted and would now let the north alone. It is believed in Scandinavia that Stalin will squeeze concessions from the helpless Finns on every point under discussion, forcing them to abandon the defense pact with Sweden and Norway, drawing the frontier wherever he likes, inducing the Finns to expedite the railway to the Gulf of Bothnia for which the treaty provides and for which it is reported Russia will offer economic assistance.

The attack by the Russian official news agency upon C. J. Hambro, president of the Norwegian Parliament and chairman of its foreign relations committee, startled Scandinavia, since Norway had seemed far less eager for the pact than the Swedes were. Indeed Norway's interest in the future of Finland seems lukewarm. The attack was the more surprising in that neither Norwegians nor Swedes have the faintest intention of supporting any Finnish desire for revision of the new frontiers which Russia is drawing almost at will. This has been clear from the first.

For these reasons some observers find the Russian veto of the northern defense pact all the more ominous for Finland and possibly for her Scandinavian neighbors. The sinking of convoyed ships seemed an equally ill omen. These were the first Norwegian vessels to be sunk while under convoy. The safety in British convoys seemed so great that Norwegian seamen preferred to join these convoys rather than trust German submarines and aircraft to stick to the rules laid down in the German admiralty's declarations to Norwegian shipping interests.

If this safety should now be greatly diminished through air attacks the whole outlook for neutrals at sea would be fundamentally changed for the worse. They might be almost at the mercy of whatever regulations the Germans chose to impose. Hitherto they have assumed that they could always fall back upon the comparative safety of British convoys.

Rep. Shafer's Condition 'Serious' After Crash

Salem, Ohio, March 21 (AP).—The condition of Representative Paul W. Shafer, 46, of Battle Creek, Mich., injured in an automobile crash, was reported today to be "serious, but not critical."

The Republican Representative's car plunged through a guard rail six miles south of here as he was driving from Washington to Three Rivers, Mich.

Capt. Robinson Given Sea Duty

Capt. Stephan B. Robinson, assistant judge advocate general, was ordered to relieve Capt. Benjamin V. McCandlish in command of the new cruiser Boise. He will leave here about July 1.

At the same time, Cap. Robert B. Simons, attached to the Office of Naval Intelligence, was detailed as commanding officer of the U. S. S. Raleigh, effective in May. He will relieve Capt. Mark L. Hersey, whose new assignment was not announced. Capt. McCandlish will become captain of the Norfolk Navy Yard.

S.S.S. TONIC must be good

So many people take it
—to increase appetite
—to boost energy

COUNTLESS thousands of men and women can testify to the benefits S.S.S. Tonic has brought them.

The facts are simple because of all conditions effecting the human body a low blood count is most deceptive. If you feel rundown . . . lack a keen appetite . . . have lost weight . . . don't give up until you restore those precious red-blood-cells back to normal.

S.S.S. Tonic may be just what you need to get you on the right road to health and happiness again.

In S.S.S. Tonic you go after the trouble in two ways . . . first you increase the appetite and better your stomach digestion—thus making better use of the food you eat—secondly, thin, weak, watery blood is made rich and red again thus giving you a boost in energy.

Try S.S.S. which any drug store can supply and no ethical dealer will suggest a substitute. The big 20 oz. size is a two week's treatment and represents a saving in the purchase price. ©S.S.S. Co.

Italy, Reich Turn the Heat On Yugoslavia

Foment Civil War, Diplomatic Dispatches To Washington Indicate

By International News Service

Diplomatic quarters tonight disclosed Germany and Italy have turned intense political heat on their Balkan neighbor, Yugoslavia.

The State Department's diplomatic experts saw a growing possibility of Yugoslavian civil war within a few weeks. This would provide an excuse for German and Italian intervention.

Diplomatic sources believed the kingdom's future hinges on whether the Axis partners reconcile their present cross purposes.

An explosion in Yugoslavia, they pointed out, could set the other Balkan states aflame and test the solidity of the Rome-Berlin Axis.

Authoritative diplomatic dispatches said Germany a few weeks ago granted support to Yugoslavia's Frankists, a hitherto obscure political party agitating for Croatian autonomy.

Germany's ostensible purpose was to persuade Yugoslavia to grant the Reich a larger share of the output of Yugoslavian copper and zinc mines. These are controlled by French and British capital, respectively.

Italy matched German contributions to the Frankists. The party's propaganda for Croatian autonomy strengthened, forcing the Serbian-dominated ministry of Premier Cvetkovic to postpone elections.

Balkan experts asserted that elections now would usher in a ministry controlled by Dr. Matchek's Croatian Peasant Party. Indefinite delay of the balloting has deepened Croatian unrest and stiffened Serbian determination.

Mrs. Davies was hostess at a buffet dinner on Tuesday at Mar-a-Laco, her Palm Beach villa, in honor of the members of the Yale Glee Club, which gave a concert at the Biltmore there. W. Horton Schoellkopf, jr., of Washington, served as acting manager of the concert.

Volunteer Back From Finland Tells of Intense Suffering

Russians Dropped Stones for Bombs, Hasey Says Here

A double fracture of his arm and the loss of all but one of his toenails, is the price Capt. John F. Hasey, 23, of Bridgewater, Mass., paid for the privilege of volunteering as an ambulance driver on the Finnish war front. But he's ready and anxious to return to France, where he hopes to continue his services in what he considers a vital duty for "a great humanitarian cause."

Hasey, who was a guest at the National Press Club yesterday, was the first wounded American volunteer to arrive from service in Finland.

"It was much worse than I imagined," Capt. Hasey said. "The intense cold (50 below zero) was bad enough—but, then carrying the still warm bodies of dead soldiers, dashing back and forth from the front almost endlessly with dying wounded . . . It was revolting. It did something to me—I can't explain."

Russians Dropped Stones

At one time, Hasey said, the Russians were dropping from their planes not bombs but large stones! Some of these bomb substitutes which he ran across weighed between 25 and 50 pounds. Hasey said some of the Russian fliers either had run out of ammunition, or were pretending that was the case.

Hasey, who so far as is known, is the first American to return with eye-witness accounts of the Finnish war, attributed the remarkably successful early stand of the Finns to their knowledge of the terrain, which gave them every advantage in guerrilla warfare. Hasey characterized as stupid the strategy of the Russians, who, he said, "just marched head-on, column after column, in the face of certain death at the hands of Finns who were shielded by trees."

Talks to Envoys

The young American volunteer discounted reports he had enlitsed with the Finnish ambulance units. He said he left the employ of an international jeweler in Paris shortly after the Finnish war broke out to volunteer in the American Volunteer Ambulance Corps, with headquarters in Paris. That corps selected Hasey to captain a special detachment of four men for service in Finland. His three American companions are still in Finland.

Capt. Hasey visited the French Embassy yesterday, where he talked with Ambassador Rene de Saint-Quentin, and later was the guest of Finnish Minister Hjalmar Procope before departing for his New England home.

Mrs. Grady Addresses Pen Women

Mrs. Henry F. Grady, past president of the San Francisco Branch of the League of American Pen Wmen, appeared in a gay Spanish costume yesterday afternoon as speaker at the fellowship tea of the local branch of the league, at which she talked on "Spanish Influence in California."

With her doll, Guadulupe, in her arms, she opened her discussion with a poem describing California, "stretching down the middle of the world."

Mrs. Grady, who is the daughter of Senator R. F. Valle, is a member of one of the oldest Spanish families in California. She described the Camulos Ranch, given to her ancestors by a grant from the King of Spain. It was there that Helen Hunt Jackson wrote "Ramona," using members of the family as characters. Mrs. Grady's father, was Don Filipe, hero of the novel.

350,000 FAMILIES SHARE A BIRTHDAY

TODAY, as you read this advertisement, a fine old gentleman and his wife are basking in the sunshine of a little California town. They can afford to take things easy, for theirs is the security of Provident Mutual monthly income checks. They are two of the nearly 40,000 policy owners who, in the last 75 years, have received a total of 132 millions of dollars in their declining years from Provident Mutual Endowment policies.

Today in another city a young widow and her children face life bravely and fearlessly because punctually on the first of every month they receive a Provident Mutual income check, guaranteed as long as the mother lives. From the fulness of her heart she writes: "I don't know what I would do without it." She is only one of the 37,000 individuals to whom the Provident has paid 190 millions of dollars in death claims since its organization in 1865.

Today in an Eastern university a boy is poring over a chemistry text-book. He had not expected to go to college, for his Dad had been wiped out by the depression. But fortunately there were still the cash values of Dad's Provident policies—and a life-long ambition will become a reality for him as well as for many of the thousands to whom the Provident has paid 182 millions of dollars in cash values, annuities, and other values, not including dividends.

These stories, repeated many times over with countless variations, are the stories of the approximately 150,000 families who have already benefited from Provident Mutual service, and typify the aspirations of the nearly 200,000 families who today are banded together as owners of the Company on its 75th birthday. To them we extend our birthday greetings, and on this, our diamond anniversary, we take pride not so much in our millions of assets, nor in our nearly one billion of insurance in force, as in the homes which have been enriched through the magic miracle of life insurance.

A leading role in this every-day drama of living is played by the Provident Mutual agent, who through times of adversity as well as prosperity has helped to safeguard the future of his clients. The high esteem of the people he has protected is a tribute to his friendly service.

We invite you to send for a copy of Provident Mutual's 1939 Annual Report, including the balance sheet of assets and liabilities; the summary of income and disbursements; and the list of securities held by the Company for the benefit of its policy owners and beneficiaries.

WASHINGTON'S CHURCHES

Will Be Pictured Next In the "Our Town In Pictures" Series

IN SUNDAY'S POST

FIVE WEEKS AGO the Sunday Post gave Washington a new special section. Eight pages of candid action pictures were devoted to telling the complete story of Washington's grade schools.

This camera story was graphic, easily grasped and full of human interest.

It was greeted with enthusiasm. This grew with each succeeding school section.

The widespread approval of this pictorial feature encourages The Post to bring you another series of picture stories.

Beginning Sunday, "Our Town In Pictures" portrays for you the picture story of Washington's religious life in the first of three sections on Washington churches.

Sunday's 8-Page Picture Section In The Post Will Cover Many Phases of Church Life:

Major Faiths

The Catholic, Protestant and Jewish faiths will be represented by sequences showing mass and benediction by a Catholic priest, the observance of the Jewish Sabbath and Sunday morning services in a Protestant church.

Church Federation

Candid camera shots of a board member of the Washington Federation of Churches.

Church Art

Pictures giving a cross-section of the various types of church architecture to be found in Washington.

Men's Bible Class

The Post chose as an example the oldest Men's Bible Class in the city, and one of the oldest in the country—Vaughn Class at Calvary Baptist.

Women's Church Groups

Sunday's Post shows you a women's activity in St. Albans Church and the work of the Washington Council of Church Women.

Interdenominational

The church as a social center is typified by Temple Center, in which several Protestant denominations co-operate.

Smaller Denominations

Sunday's Post will feature pictures of the Quakers and the Greek Orthodox Church in Washington.

Church Fashions

Pictures taken Palm Sunday, when many of the church-going women wore their new spring outfits.

Sunday Schools

Activities in a modern Sunday School will be shown, and there will be a personality sketch of Dr. Charles Reasner, president of the Sunday School Association.

Reynaud Call Widens Gap, Italy Believes

New French Cabinet Comes as Unpleasant Surprise to Rome

By Herbert L. Matthews
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, March 21.—The formation of the Paul Reynaud government is an unpleasant shock which widens the gap between Italy and France and makes even slimmer the already very slim chance of the Allies gaining Rome's support. Reynaud is by reputation a strong Anglophile and an enemy of fascism. Finally, there is the feeling that this means the intensification of the war, which is something Italy does not want.

This is "a crisis of ideas and methods," according to the paper Corriere Della Sera, and a sign of the perennial weakness of democracies, according to all newspapers. "Former Premier Daladier," says the Stampa, was "a mediocre personality" and while Reynaud "has greater mental agility, that is a parliamentary quality and not a virtue in time of war." The Stampa's conclusion is that "the democracies are passing from failure to even greater failure."

"Battle Notice" to Berlin

Berlin, March 21 (AP).—The Nazi press tonight interpreted the formation of the new French government under Premier Paul Reynaud as a "battle notice" to Germany.

"Germany knows what it owes to this cabinet: war and again war," said the Berliner Lokalanzeiger. "It is the battle notice of Jewish and other high finance against National Socialistic Germany."

Soviet Press Scores Daladier

Copyright by New York Times

Moscow, March 21.—Some papers devote considerable space to attacking former Premier Daladier. Trud declares, "Dalader, during these two years, has fully justified the trust shown him by high finance and capital." He is also attacked for increasing taxes frequently and for abolishing the 44-hour working week.

Nevertheless, despite this recital of former Premiere Daladier's crimes, the paper seems to think that no improvement can be expected from the cabinet of Paul Reynaud.

Men French Chose To 'Push the War'

Paul Reynaud, premier and foreign minister.
Camille Chautemps, vice premier.
Edouard Daladier, national defense.
Cesar Campinchi, navy.
Laurent Eynac, air.
Raoul Dautry, armament.
Henri Roy, interior.
Louis Rollin, commerce.
Albert Serol, justice.
Lucien Lamoureux, finance.
Georges Mandel, colonies.
Albert Sarraut, public instruction.
Henri Quequille, provisions.
Paul Thellier, agriculture.
Georges Monnet, blockade.
Anatole de Monzie, public works.
Charles Pomaret, labor.
Jules Julien, communications.
Louis Frossard, information.
Alphonse Rio, merchant marine.
Marcel Heraud, public health.
Albert Riviere, pensions.

Reynaud Cabinet Faces Test Today

measure, if not entirely, due to an accident.

[The minutes of the Tuesday night session are said to have shown that several deputies had voted for the government and were listed as having abstained. It was then revealed that, during the counting of the votes, a basket containing many voting cards was mislaid and the names on these cards were added to the list of abstainers. A number of deputies who had been listed as having abstained, had in reality voted for the government.]

Reynaud and his cabinet will hold their first formal ministerial council with President Albert Lebrun tomorrow morning and appear before the Chamber in the afternoon.

The atmosphere is then expected to be clarified and the new combination will learn publicly how it stands.

The rightist groups displeased with the Raynaud cabinet—former Premier Etienne Flandin's Republican Alliance, and Louis Marin's Rightist Republican Federation—asserted that it is not a "true war cabinet" as demanded by critics.

Daladier's decision to remain in the government as national defense minister was made after close friends had said he felt he needed a rest. However, he will get little rest in his old role at the war ministry, and, if the Renaud government fails to last, there are strong chances that President Lebrun will ask him to reconsider and attempt to form a new government of his own.

He refused to do this after his cabinet resigned Wednesday because a majority of the Chamber refused to vote on a motion of confidence, but if Reynaud's efforts fail, the chances are generally considered good that he will yield.

Strong figures in the Reynaud cabinet besides Daladier are Cesar Campinchi, whose work as minister of the navy in the previous government has been widely approved, and Dautry, whose management of the armaments ministry has been applauded.

Creation of a ministry of information, with the journalist, Louis Oscar Frossard, in charge, was one of the innovations. A general reorganization of the propaganda services is expected to follow.

Reporters See Little Damage At Nazi Base

Correspondents Taken On Tour of Sylt, Target of British Raid

By Alvin J. Steinkopf,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Hornum, Island of Sylt, March 21. Three American correspondents who traveled to this British-raided German air base saw some evidence tonight of the six-hour bombings of Tuesday night and Wednesday morning.

We were shown a building described by the Germans as an infirmary on which a direct hit was scored.

In our trip across the six-mile Hindenburg Dam, on a slow special train which stopped frequently for inspection of the right-of-way, we were unable, however, to see any evidence of damage to the strategic little railway which is the lifeline of Sylt.

The sand dunes at the southern end of the island were literally peppered with British bombs, and citizens and soldiers were curiously examining the craters.

Officers estimated that about 40 bombs fell on the extensive grounds of the airport in the south.

We could see no signs that any hangars had been hit directly. An incendiary bomb fell on the great steel crane which boosts seaplanes out of the water but the bomb had sputtered out on the iron platform.

Explosions near the hangars had shattered windows, and bombs falling into the sea had caused great cakes of ice to fly about.

No Hangars Hit

German fliers said the hangars and the crane probably were the objectives of the raiders but that the bombs were released from too great a height for any accuracy.

"Of course, our antiaircraft guns harried them and they seemed to be nervous," said these Germans. "There was lots of noise but little if any military effectiveness."

Everyone was saved in the bombed building which the Germans described as an infirmary, but the roof was blown off and the walls cracked. The occupants were in the cellar.

The only other building we saw which showed extensive signs of damage was a small structure in which practice range targets were stored.

The Germans claimed three British planes were shot down, one near this little community.

Briton's Body Found

This latter plane sank in the sea, but the body of an officer, who apparently sprang from the plane as it was about to crash, was found on the ice the next morning.

The insignia had been removed from his uniform. The German army will give him a military funeral tomorrow.

On our way across the Hindenburg Dam we were able to climb over the great stones of which it was built and inspect the dam, rails and cars.

As far as we could see, there were no signs of damage to the dam.

Sylt, in peacetime, entertains tourists and supplies lobsters to the more expensive restaurants of Europe. In wartime, it is part of Germany's air front against England; a frequent jumping-off place for British-bound German bombers.

Field Marshal Herman Wilhelm Goering placed his personal airplane, Manfred von Richthofen, at our disposal for the greater part of the trip to Sylt.

Bradley, member of the House subcommittee on mines and mining, said he would be joined in a formal inquiry tomorrow by Representatives Winter (Republican), Kansas; Cravens (Democrat), Arkansas, and Paterson (Democrat), Florida.

Cold, Light Rain Or Snow Forecast For D. C. Area

Winter was on its way back to Washington, with a low temperature of 29 degrees at 7 a. m. yesterday and light rain or snow predicted for today. The Weather Bureau also said it would be "colder" tonight, though the lowest temperature predicted for last night was 34 degrees.

Highest temperature yesterday was 47, at 3 p. m.

The cold wave yesterday reached into the south and as far west as Missouri, according to United Press reports. Rain, hail, thunder, lightning, snow and sleet were reported in New England; $50,000 damage was caused when a lightning bolt toppled a 180-foot brick chimney over onto a textile factory. Snow fell at Albany and Buffalo and temperatures in the Great Lakes region and upper Ohio and Mississippi valleys ranged from 5 to 10 degrees below normal.

BritishDemand SmallerCabinet And More War

bull market after his masterly defense of British policy in the Finnish crisis and the wave of enthusiasm throughout the country over the air raids on Sylt. Public opinion is gathering behind the proponents of change, but the time is not ripe yet for major developments despite what has happened in France.

Because of the supreme war council, any change in government there affecting the reorientation of policy is bound to be reflected in political changes here, unless the present British government can accommodate itself to the future policy of the Allies.

That is Chamberlain's problem now: He can hold out against the criticisms of certain cabinet members who are definitely under fire, he can yield the positions under attack, or he can reorganize the whole government in such a way as to meet most criticism without losing his scalp. His best way of holding the leadership of the country would seem to be by sharing it, but for the time being he need not do anything.

Churchill Mentioned

There is no indication of immediate changes, but if and when they come they will provide a smaller war cabinet, with Admiralty Lord Churchill as minister of defense, some other "strong man" coordinating the economic and the war effort and all members freed from departmental duties. This would go far toward quieting critics of the government and allaying the anxiety felt widely in this country that hindsight rather than foresight guides the nation's policy.

In today's debate, Robert Boothby, Conservative, expressed the view that the time has come here to follow the lead of the French and reorganize the government. His views significantly echoed those of Geoffrey Mander, Liberal, who said that Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, and Sir Samuel Hoare, lord privy seal, were heavy "liabilities" both home and abroad.

Much criticism was uttered, too, regarding the conduct of the ministry of economic warfare, headed by Ronald Cross, on the ground that too much war material for Germany was being allowed to reach its destination through neutral countries.

Ore Blockade Called For

Not only do the critics of the Chamberlain government want a more aggressive policy toward Germany, but a stiffer attitude toward the neutrals, as indicated by War Minister Oliver Stanley's luncheon speech yesterday. Patrol of Norwegian territorial waters to prevent shipments of Swedish ore to Germany was openly advocated by Mander in the House of Commons this afternoon on the ground that Norway had demonstrated its inability to maintain the neutrality of those waters.

Discussing the situation, Mander declared it was very well for cabinet ministers to urge neutrals to join the war, but he said the only way to rally them to Britain's side was to show by vigor and determination that the Allies are going to win the war. Mander was especially concerned about the increase in exports of cotton from the United States to neutral countries contiguous to Germany.

Meanwhile, he said, Vladivostok's imports of tin, possibly for Germany, had amounted last January to 200,000 tons, compared to none a year ago.

Boothby, a friend of Churchill, joined the debate from the Conservative back bench, saying that too much contraband was reaching Germany from Trieste and Genoa, as well as Vladivostok. Conceding the diplomatic difficulties involved in the problem of cotton control and admitting the necessity of avoiding serious difficulties with the United States now, Boothby said it was ridiculous that the government had not yet blocked foreign assets to prevent aliens from selling securities in the London market and taking sterling in exchange.

Dr. C. P. Clark Named President Of District S. A. R.

Dr. Clifton P. Clark, of 1623 Lanier place northwest, Wednesday night was elected president of the District Society of the Sons of the American Revolution. He succeeds Charles S. McConnell, of 3545 Sixteenth street northwest.

Other officers who will take office with Clark April 19, include: Dr. W. Harvey Wise, jr., first vice president; Wade H. Ellis, second vice president; C. Leonard Brown, third vice president; Benjamin D. Hill, jr., secretary; McDonald Miller, secretary; Harvey B. Gram, jr., treasurer; William W. Badgley, registrar; Craig L. Reddish, assistant registrar; John D. Wolcott, historian; John F. Little, librarian; the Rev. Samuel M. Croft, chaplain, and Maj. Harry A. Davis, trustee.

Lieut. Comdr. Bernard L. Austin, U. S. N., spoke on national defense. The meeting was held at the Mayflower Hotel.

his fellow citizens "what he sees." Then he added:

"Upon this interpretation of my duties as a diplomat I am content to risk my official head.

"If I be wrong, then let the executioner be summoned and wield his axe."

Cromwell's reported intention to run for the Senate from New Jersey, while Secretary of Navy Edison seeks the governorship, also was held to increase the likelihood of his resigning.

He is expected here today or tomorrow to confer with President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull.

The State Department last night issued the following statement:

The Secretary of State has now examined the text of the address made at Toronto on March 19 by the American Minister to Canada, Mr. James H. R. Cromwell.

Secretary Hull found that the address contravened standing instructions to American diplomatic officers, as public discussion of controversial policies of other governments, particularly with governments engaged in war, without the prior knowledge and permission of this Government, is not in accord with such instructions. Such public statements by our diplomatic representatives are likely to disturb the relations between this and other governments.

Secretary Hull has telegraphed his views to Mr. Cromwell and has asked that in the future he observe the standing instructions.

Assailed Isolationists

Cromwell, addressing a joint meeting of the Canadian Club and the Empire Club, criticized isolationist views in this country, insisting he did not understand how any intelligent ctizen of any neutral democracy could state with conviction that he had no interest in the outcome of the war.

He said that if the Allies won he could see "no threat to the well-being, to the peace or to the social and economic order of the neutral democracies, be they large or small."

Regarding the result if Germany won, he asked what kind of rule was being applied to countries incorporated into the Nazi "living space."

"Did the Austrians, Czecho-Slovakians or the Poles have a voice in the determination of their present form of government?" he asked.

We'll Suffer

First Lady's View On Nazi Victory

New York, March 21 (INS).—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt today said she believes that the United States will be adversely affected if Germany emerges victorious from her war with France and Great Britain.

Foreign press correspondents asked the First Lady:

"If the Allies should lose the war, would the United States stand to suffer."

She replied simply, and without further elucidation: "Yes."

Mrs. Roosevelt declined to be quoted concerning the current controversy over the appointment of Prof. Bertrand Russell to the faculty of the College of the City of New York.

"Heavens, no!" was her disclaimer when asked whether she would accept a Presidential nomination.

Waiter Plunges From Taft Bridge; Car Strikes Body

Cornelius De Witt Van Buren, 28, of 1901 N street northwest, plunged to his death last night from the center span of Taft bridge to Cathedral avenue, 70 feet below. He struck the pavement headfirst and was run over, police said, by an automobile which did not stop.

According to Miss Mary Clay, his landlady, Van Buren was an unemployed waiter, the son of De Witt Van Buren, a New York attorney. She said he had not worked regularly since October and had received $10 a week from his father. A check arrived yesterday, she said, and he appeared in excellent spirits and spoke of the prospect of a job beginning next week.

Miss Clay said he leaves a wife, from whom he was separated and who is believed to live in northwest Washington.

Zoning Change Fought

It was predicted by realtors who attended the public hearing held at the courthouse Tuesday night, that enactment of two proposed amendments to the county zoning ordinance would "freeze" the development of Arlington County.

The suggested minimum lot requirements for apartments and semi-detached homes would curtail building activities in the county, real estate operators declared.

One of the amendments suggested by Zoning Administrator Donald Locke which was strongly opposed by real estate men would require that site for apartments contain at least 2,000 square feet for each family unit in the building. The lots on which semidetached homes are constructed to be not less than 28 feet in width and contain not less than 2800 square feet.

"BAND PARADE" IN WARDMAN. When Gray Gordon and his 15-piece band slide into their "Tic Toc Rhythm" in Wardman's Metronome Room next Tuesday evening, it will mark the beginning of a spring parade of "big-name bands" in this favorite spot.

Reggie Childs, Les Brown and Don Bestor are among the nationally known maestros who will bring their orchestras into the Metronome Room within the next month or two between their theatrical engagements.

Gray Gordon will arrive in Washington with a ready-made popularity, since he was starred recently at the Earle Theater. His featured entertainers include singers Rita Ray and Cliff Grass.

The Wardman management is not only going to give their spring patrons a spring assortment of the country's best dance music, but an extra portion of it. Beginning with the Gordon engagement, dancing will begin at 9 o'clock, continuing until 2 a. m.

RIVIERA SCOOP. Pete Macias, of the Lounge Riviera, is feeling extra chipper because he beat the town in bringing out the tunes from "Higher and Higher," newest Rogers and Hart musical. Credit, too, to Trumpeter Artie Humes who grabs new piano scores while they're still smoking and makes full orchestra arrangements.

PONY FOLLOWS COLT. We blush slightly at the preceding, because it happens to mean that shortly after beautiful Ethel Barrymore Colt's Shoreham engagement next week, the Blue Room will again present "Baby Doll," the trained pony who always panics audiences . . . The splendid singer, Marjorie King, will also return to the Shoreham soon. . . . Publicist Joe Deupree vows that tomorrow's Shoreham fashion luncheon will be the most stunning of the season.

BURT'S HOUR GLASS. That will be the new name of the Hour Glass under Burt Lopatin's ownership. Restaurateur Lopatin plans to operate the H. G. as a smart spot, with entertainment and "atmosphere" plus popular prices.

SPRINGTIME URGE DEPARTMENT. Del Rio's Manager Herbie Sachs is up in New York and we hear he has a thousand bees in his bonnet about a springtime and summer program for D. R. . . . Russ Cullen, of the Pall Mall Room, has just received notification of his divorce from Singer Hazel Warren and is lookin' around, but not seriously, he says. . . . Neptune Room's Bert Granoff is figgering on whether to go on a Texas hunting trip, a South American cruise or to work in New York when he leaves town on March 29. We have a feeling that the cruise is going to win out. . . . Hi Hat's Angie Rodante is going places with that well-known character, Mr. "Just-a-Friend." . . . The spring love-bug is sneaking around Shar-Zad and three members of Bill McCune's band are badly, if not fatally, bitten. . . . Anchor Room's Matt Windsor is in the throes of composing a song. He didn't tell us. We just know it. . . . Lynne Allison, of the Robin Hood, says she would like to write a column about what night spot entertainers think about night spot columns. Any time you say, my linnet. . . . Dick Ashby's bambino daughter, Anna Therese, has just cut her third tooth and is asking for chile con carne from Dick's Grill. . . . Madrillon's Parker avers that he's tired of being called "Pioneer Parker" just because of that story about his being marooned all night in a snowstorm back in February. . . . Maestro Milton Davis, of the Rainbow Room, said we could select the band's summer uniforms, but backed out completely when we suggested peach colored flannel slacks and rainbow plaid jackets. . . . A breath from the West Coast says that Capt. Don Dickerman is starting a new Pirates Den on Catalina Island with Rudy Vallee and Errol Flynn as backers.

FOR PLUTOCRATS. If you're one of those who put out a dollar for Fortune, you'll find a recognizable but unlabeled sketch of Eddy Mayehoff, of the Cafe Caprice, in the next issue. It's used in connection with the story about how to try to get a loan from the RFC.

CLIFF GRASS, featured with Gray Gordon's band, which will open at the Metronome Room on Monday

COMINGS AND GOINGS. Maxine Tappan will say farewell to the Mayflower Lounge and her thousand-odd admirers on Saturday eve. . . . Vincente de la Garza is the new singer in the King Cole Room, sings and guitars the songs now popular in Mexico City. Yes, Evelyn Knight is still there. . . . There'll be another Wally Wanger revue, the "Easter Parade" in Casino Royal next week.

A BUY! La Helen Hamilton of the Troika calls it to our attention that you may perc. in her elegant nightery from 6:30 p. m. to 2 a. m., dance all evening and see two entirely different floor shows and incur only one cocktail and dinner check.

CAPITAL NOSTALGIA. Paul Martin, the cartoon artist who kept the Lotus show in a continuous explosion of laughs for two weeks, writes from Boston to say that he's homesick for Washington and the Lotus, though it was his first visit here.

SWING IT! That's the slogan at River Bend tonight. Maestro George Stein and his henchmen are tossing that weekly "sizzle session" of rhythm that swingsters vow is the finest. And don't forget those toothsome River Bend chicken dinners.

NIGHTINGALE will probably have a record week-end with this fortunate break in the weather. Bill Downer's perfectly tempoed dance music, the huge dance floor and attractive rustic surroundings all contribute to the Nightingale appeal.

House Asked For 5 Million In Venereal War

2 Million More Sought; Funds Increased To Fight Tick Fever

The House Appropriations Committee proposed yesterday that Congress increase funds for the Public Health Service $2,000,000 more than budget estimates for venereal disease control, making a total of $5,000,000 sought.

The committee also proposed that appropriations for production of vaccine to combat Rocky Mountain spotted fever be increased 73 per cent, or $75,700 to operate the spotted fever laboratory at Hamilton Mont. This increase raised recommendations for control of epidemic diseases to $380,700.

Reporting the Labor Department-Federal Security Agency bill to the House, the committee lopped items aggregating approximately $506,000 off Public Health Service appropriations, making a total for the service, with proposed increases, of $31,582,000. This is 2,479,375 more than the current appropriation and $1,494,209 over the budget.

Budgetary Limits Cited

"Of all the items under this heading in the bill," the committee said, "the program for venereal disease control undoubtedly is the most important at this time in the eyes of Congress and the public. . . . In the opinion of the committee, the venereal disease problem is one of the most important confronting the American people from the standpoint of the national health.

"While expenditures for medical research are essential and have been efficacious in bringing to the world practically all of the medical cures it knows today, nonetheless, it does seem to the committee that we might better set about expending our limited funds for public health in effecting cures of diseases that we know can be cured than to overemphasize the research phases of the health problem and find ourselves in the position, because of budgetary limitations, of not being able to put into practical use the accomplishments flowing from the research.

"The cure for venereal disease is already known; no research is required. That it can be cured on a large-scale basis is an established fact.

New Vaccine

". . . In the minds of the committee, nothing can be more important than dedicating Federal funds to the eradication of a dreaded disease which, as a result of its ravages, is responsible for a goodly percentage of our citizenry that is today confined in mental institutions. As a factor in national defense, any success obtained in reducing the incidence and effect of the disease on our manhood and womanhood is unquestioned. What good are implements of war without citizens healthy in mind and body to man them?"

The Public Health Service informed Congress it was developing a new method of producing vaccine for Rocky Mountain spotted fever from embryonic chick tissue.

Dr. L. R. Thompson, assistant surgeon general, told a House subcommittee the number of requests for vaccine had been virtually double the amount the service had been able to supply, but predicted that the new method might enable it to fill the demand.

He also told the subcommittee that "for the first time in the history of the service we have developed a rabbit serum, which will cure Rocky Mountain spotted fever in infected animals."

$100,000 Asked In Bicycle Crash

Asserting that she suffered a brain concussion and other severe injuries when a messenger ran her down with his bicycle, Mrs. Otta Ryan Crabill, 44, 1747 P street northwest, sued the Western Union Telegraph Co. for $100,000 in the District Court yesterday.

Mrs. Crabill's complaint said the accident occurred when she was crossing the street at Dupont Circle the night of December 19, 1939. She was incapacitated for her calling of professional nurse, the complaint said. Mrs. Crabill's husband, Dr. Marion Burtram Crabill, in the same suit asked an additional $15,000 for loss occasioned him by the injury of his wife.

Sex Education in the Schools

Knowledge Combats Disease, Health Service Tells Objectors

A report from a subcommittee of the Board of Trade, assailing sex instruction in public schools, drew criticism yesterday from an official of the United States Public Health Service which recently advocated teaching biologic facts in schools.

Asked to comment on a report by the subcommittee on curriculum of the Board of Trade's public school committee emphatically protesting against sex instruction "anywhere in the schools," Dr. R. A. Vonderlehr, assistant surgeon general in charge of the service's division of venereal disease control, declared:

"The Public Health Service is interested in sex education in the schools primarily as a means of preventing the spread of venereal diseases. Sex instruction is an incidental of this aim.

500,000 Treated Yearly

"Ideally speaking, we feel that if children are taught the biologic facts of life, theoretically, at least, there is some chance of preventing exposures which, we find, frequently occur in young people under 20 and are due principally to ignorance."

Dr. Vonderlehr said that the experience of the Public Health Service shows that about half of all the persons contracting syphilis in the United States are exposed to it before the age of 25.

Approximately 500,000 persons contract syphilis and apply for treatment every year, he stated, and of this number about 11,000 are between the ages of 11 and 15. He declared that approximately 100,000 contract the disease between 11 and 20.

The report to the Board of Trade committee contended that sex instruction would tend to acentuate sex and "would be far more detrimental than any possible good that could come from it."

Publication Was for Teachers

The ordinary teacher, it was contended, lacks necessary knowledge or training to teach sex subjects.

Dr. Vonderlehr pointed out that the Health Service publication referred to was not intended for students but for use by teachers to suggest techniques of sex education. Many school textbooks on hygiene and physiology even go so far as to ignore the existence of reproductive organs, he said.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, pointed out that sex instruction does not exist in Washington schools in the form scored by the subcommittee whose chairman was Gen. Amos A. Fries. It takes the form of studies of the reproduction of animals and the pollination of plants in connection with science courses in the junior and senior high schools, he said.

Physicians Teach Hygiene

In addition, regular hygiene lectures are given by competent physicians, Dr. Ballou declared.

The report on sex education will be acted upon at the committee's April meeting. Another report by Gen. Fries was adopted. It emphasized a need for the highest possible religious and moral atmosphere in the schoolroom, and suggested example by teacher as a means of accomplishing this aim.

Dr. Ballou said he was opposed to teaching religion in the schools, but added that the character education program provides ethical instruction.

Dr. Vonderlehr countered Gen. Fries' contention that instruction tended to overemphasize sex by declaring that an interest in sex develops in children at an early age and without schoolroom discussion. He satid he favored a frank discussion of the facts at an age when the child can understand them.

"I feel," he declared, "that the child of verage intelligence, if made to understand biological facts, is much less apt to expose himself to the dangers of disease."

Typist Alleges Bed Fell on Her, Sues Landlord

That old vaudeville skit about a folding bed falling on someone is no joke to Mrs. Mary P. Engel, 1345 Nineteenth street northwest, she indicated in a suit filed for her in the District Court yesterday by Attorney Stacy M. Reed. She claimed such a bed unfolded on top of her.

Mrs. Engel asked $7,500 damages of Dupont Circle, Inc., operators of the apartment house where she lives, and H. L. Rust Co., 1001 Fifteenth street northwest, the rental agents.

Mrs. Engel's complaint said that she had several times asked that the folding bed be repaired and that adjustments were made. Nevertheless, the complaint said, the bed collapsed when she started to retire on the night of November 17, 1939, severely injuring her back and preventing her continuing her employment as a typist for the Public Works Administration.

that does not include anybody else in the N. Y. A.," he added.

Secretary Ickes' objections to conspicuous lettering of official cars was revealed while Maurice Collins, executive assistant to Federal Security Administrator McNutt, was on the stand.

Collins explained that, in answer to a suggestion that cars be conspicuously labeled—as the law provides—Ickes wrote:

"The proposed lettering would undoubtedly prove embarrassing to many of our employes who must use their cars after regular working hours on official business in making important contacts, but the use of which might be misinterpreted by a casual observer.

Objectionable to Ickes

"I use official Government cars on which purposefully there is no lettering except the license tag, and I do not see why employes of the Department of the Interior, even though paid from C. C. C. funds, should be inflicted with a form of advertising which I find objectionable for myself."

Failure to mark the cars conspicuously was a "violation of the law," suggested Representative Tarver (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the subcommittee.

"That is my opinion," replied Collins.

In its sharply worded report, the committee asserted that the law is "clear" and that it expects compliance with "the letter of the law." An inquiry at the next session of Congress will be made "to determine the fact of compliance," the report stated.

One solution of the automobile question was proposed by Representative Engel (Republican), of Michigan. Suggesting that economies could be effected through permitting Federal officials in the District to use taxicabs, Engel pointed out that "there isn't a public building we have here but what lies within the 20-cent rate zone."

See 25 Per Cent Saving

One estimate presented to the committee was that a 25 per cent saving could be made if taxis were substituted for official cars.

No Strings to This:

Pinocchio Unreels Happiness To 600 Crippled Youngsters

1. There was "No Parking Here" sign in the lobby of RKO-Keith's Theater yesterday when crippled youngsters who had arrived in wheel chairs parked their wooden runabouts in favor of regular—and softer—theater chairs

Take a world of happiness, add to it an ocean of gratitude and then multiply the sum by 600 to get a picture of the "Pinocchio" preview at RKO Keith's Theater yesterday morning for Washington's crippled children.

The theater management, the American Red Cross, Kiwanians, Rotarians, hospitals, social agencies, a motor company and scores of private citizens cooperated to make the unique party possible.

From slum dwellings and fine homes, clinics and institutions, school houses and community centers they came, these boys and girls with twisted legs, withered arms, rheumatic hearts and other ills.

There were Edith Mae Meile and Elmer Donn Miller, 11 each, their limbs in braces, helping other youngsters to their seats because they took their responsibilities as cochairmen of the party mighty seriously.

There was Martha Geesling, viewing her first movie since being crippled in an accident more than 13 years ago.

2. Three Langdon School pupils as they viewed "Pinocchio." Left to right—Jimmy Smith, 15; Elmer Donn Miller, 11, and Gloria Moore, 15. It was a happy day for the 600 youngsters who attended

And the hundreds of others, their ages ranging from 4 to 20-odd, some of whom were seeing the first motion picture of their lives and others who had not been out of doors for months.

Policemen and firemen carried boys and girls out of cars and ambulances, placed them tenderly in wheel chairs. The theater ushers and attendants, who previously had notified Manager Hardie Meakin they would not accept overtime pay for starting work two hours early, not only carried many youngsters to their seats but even fed ice cream—served free by Southern Dairies—to those invalids requiring such assistance.

Most premieres are top hat, white tie and mink-coated affairs. This one was short on swank, long on the heart tug. The kid'sll probably remember it forever.

3. No party is complete without ice cream. The photographer sneaked up on Hardie Meakin, RKO-Keith's manager and host to the party, and snapped him dishing out frozen goodies to Jean Lee Fram, 7, and John Fratantuono, 10

Rift Develops In California 3d-Term Unity

Movement Bifurcates As Peace Maker Ickes Gets Back to Capital

Another rift opened yesterday in California's third-term "harmony" slate even as Secretary of the Interior Ickes, just back from California, termed the State "overwhelmingly for a third term."

Lieut. Gov. Ellis E. Patterson withdrew his name from the slate and hinted a second slate of Roosevelt delegates may be filed. Two third term slates would split the Roosevelt vote and enhance the prospects of the Garner ticket, running in opposition.

Associated Press dispatches from Sacramento quoted Patterson as sayin ghe withdrew because he believed the "harmony" delegate slate was not representative, that it did not restore harmony and would be defeated.

Gov. Olson immediately said Patterson "made a mistake" in withdrawing.

"I feel the personnel of the delegation shows it is overwhelming liberal, pro-New Deal and fully pledged to Mr. Roosevelt for a third term," Olson said.

Secretary Ickes recently made a hurried trip to California following reports that Olson and McAdoo would file separate third-term slates. After conferences with Ickes, agreement was reached on the single delegate list.

Opposed to a third term, Senator Downey, of California, refused to join in the State's draft movement.

Secretary Ickes at a press conference here yesterday said his California trip convinced him the State was for Roosevelt.

building. Columbia is in a famous mule-raising county, and the county will be celebrating its annual "Mule Day." Farley will speak at the dedication along with Senators McKellar and Stewart, of Tennessee. The same night Farley is scheduled to address young Democrats in Nashville, Tenn.

Although Secretary of State Hull has discouraged "favorite son" moves and has remained strictly aloof from the Democratic candidate scramble, Farley will be moving through the home territory of the man whose name frequently has been coupled with his on the 1940 ticket.

Again in North Carolina, Farley will address gatherings strongly friendly to Hull. The North Carolina delegation is expected to be instructed for Gov. Clyde R. Hoey as "favorite son" with an informal Hull release clause.

Calling first on the President's secretary, Marvin McIntyre, at Asheville, Farley will dedicate a postoffice at Canton, N. C. He is expected to dedicate two postoffices in the Congressional district of Representative Doughton, at Boone and Statesville, addressing a young Democratic meeting at the latter.

Farley's Southern trip would carry him as far South as Texas, and would include stops in Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia, Louisiana and Kentucky. The Postmaster General also is expected to swing westward into Missouri and Kansas.

At the Capitol, Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, declared Farley's unqualified announcement of candidacy had brought new pledges of support for the Holt anti-third term resolution.

Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, one of the original "Wheeler-for-President" backers, said he was "very proud Mr. Farley has spoken out."

"There has been too much pussyfooting," said Johnson. "We need more forthright statements like his to clear the atmosphere. I am taking what he said seriously."

Vice President Garner had no comment, but one Senator said "this is the first day I've seen Jack with a grin on his face for weeks."

While Michigan headquarters were opened for Federal Security Administrator McNutt in Detroit yesterday with announcement that he was "not a rival" of President Roosevelt, McNutt supporters at the Capitol also appeared pleased with the Farley announcement.

Bus Terminal Opening Set For Monday

The company is in process of moving now from the terminal at 1407 New York avenue northwest, its location for the past seven years. Higher-Up Reported Seized In Ring Blamed for 30 Killings

'Pittsburgh Phil' Strauss Expected To Name Director of Syndicate; Gun Supply Chief Said to Be Arrested

By International News Service

New York, March 21.—With a new voice promising to join the chorus of gangland members of the Brooklyn murder-for-profit syndicate who think it better to tell all, District Attorney William F. O'Dwyer tonight fitted together an evidential picture of multiple murder that may have taken a toll of 30 lives.

O'Dwyer also was reported to have taken into custody a behind-the-scenes figure who supplied the syndicate with its arsenal of guns and cartridges for distribution to small-time triggermen who plied their trade for as little as $5 and $10 a head.

Meanwhile, up-State police were rounding up evidence that Westchester and Rockland counties had served as the graveyard for many of the syndicate's victims.

The new voice O'Dwyer expects to hear telling a tale of mass assassination is that of Harry (Pittsburgh Phil) Strauss, well-barbered, impeccably clad adornment of the underworld, already under a murder indictment in connection with the syndicate's activities. O'Dwyer's hope is that he can persuade Strauss to name the mysterious "big boy" who, O'Dwyer believes, was the directing genius of the syndicate's operations.

A defense fund for the murder ring already is levying its assessments, said O'Dwyer, adding that reports indicated the collections were being made in other States, an apparent confirmation that the syndicate's connections extended into the underworld of other cities.

The tug Mary C brought the injured men to shore where they were identified by a park policeman as Merrill W. Hogan and William Conrad, the pilot.

Conrad and Hogan were reported suffering from shock, exposure and lacerations.

Changing The Guard

A good deal of nonsense has been spoken and written to the general effect that when the war began France ceased to be a democracy. To prove the point, attention has been called to the drastic French censorship, to the purge of the Communist deputies in the Chamber and to the grant of plenary powers to the government.

Premier Daladier's resignation and his replacement by Paul Reynaud should end such loose talk. If France were actually a dictatorship, M. Daladier would not have felt it necessary to resign. As a dictator he would have been above the law, above public opinion, beyond the control of Parliament. But he never was and never regarded himself as a dictator. So when the criticism of the government's conduct of the war became severe he got out. In so doing he was bowing to what he believed to be the will of the people.

It is doubtful if any large body of French public opinion felt any animus against M. Daladier. He did an extremely difficult job with courage, skill and pertinacity. But he had to suffer from the sins of wartime administration and from certain external developments such as the Finnish defeat. Now he is again demonstrating his patriotism by accepting a subordinate position in a government headed by a man who until a few days ago was his subordinate.

Paul Reynaud has done wonders as finance minister. In the French public mind he represents that ability, forthrightness, determination and uncompromising will to victory which are needed to bring the war to a successful conclusion. And he is supported by an able group of ministers.

The replacement of Daladier by Reynaud involves no fundamental change of policy, only a possible change of pace. But it does signify that in France the people continue to rule even if, for the duration of the present struggle, certain democratic liberties are to be curtailed.

Stabilizing Securities

A short time ago the SEC decided to regulate stabilizing operations in case of certain types of new security offerings. In a general statement of policy, made public this week, the commission has not only discussed the general problems of stabilization but has also explained at length its reasons for issuing the new stabilization rule.

Commissioner Healy in a dissenting opinion maintains that all types of stabilization operations are deceptive and should be prohibited as not in the public interest. The other members of the SEC concede that stabilization is a form of manipulation, but conclude that under existing conditions such operations are an essential device for enabling underwriters of new issues to dispose of their holdings.

Stabilization is broadly defined by the SEC as "the buying of a security for the limited purpose of preventing or retarding a decline in its open market price in order to facilitate its distribution to the public." Under that definition the United States Government takes leading rank as a stabilizer or manipulator of security prices.

Acting through numerous official agencies, the Government is able to support the prices of its own securities, to stimulate the market in preparation for new offerings and protect it against the impact of economic and political disturbances. The mere knowledge that such support will be forthcoming in emergencies has been a powerful factor in maintaining a strong investment demand for Government issues and facilitating Government borrowing on easy terms.

It does not follow that similar latitude should be permitted in case of private issues. The abuses of so-called stabilization operations intended to boost prices and deceive investors are patent. There is, however, a difference between illegitimate manipulative activity and operations intended to prevent erratic fluctuations in the prices of new issues.

As the SEC statement points out, the Securities Exchange Act is designed to protect investors and the public from "vicious and unsocial" types of stabilizing and pegging. It does not prohibit such practices entirely. The SEC has, therefore, undertaken to regulate these operations in a limited field, in the hope of being able to protect purchasers of securities, while at the same time assisting the sale of new issues by underwriting groups.

In view of the restricted volume of new securities offered to the general public, and the large volume of new issues directly placed with investors to avoid the restrictions of the Securities Act, it is not surprising that the SEC should be unwilling to place additional obstacles in the way of new issues. As the commission says, "in the field of stabilizing it is faced with an existing condition, not a theory."

Mexico Won't Like It

Senator Townsend's energetic campaign to put a stop to Government buying of foreign silver has borne fruit. By a vote of 14 to 4 the Senate Banking and Currency Committee has reported favorably on his resolution to that effect, despite Secretary Morgenthau's reported opposition to discontinuance of the buying program at this time. Because of the emphatic character of the committee's indorsement, chances of passage of the Townsend bill seem decidedly improved.

The economic arguments in favor of abandonment of the purchase of foreign silver at artificially high prices are too well known to require repetition. Our acceptance of silver on highly favorable terms for the seller certainly supplies other countries with dollar exchange and thereby enables us to export goods that otherwise might not be bought. Nevertheless, it is a very poor exchange, from our viewpoint, to give up valuable goods in return for an overvalued metal of which we already have a superfluity.

It is also true that withdrawal of the market support for silver afforded by Treasury purchases would mean a drop in the world price of silver, with consequent shrinkage in the estimated value of our silver hoard. But such price declines will come whenever we suspend purchases, and the longer we delay the greater the losses to be expected.

The chief sufferer from cessation of foreign silver buying would be Mexico, the world's largest silver producer. Last year our purchases of Mexican silver amounted to $31,597,000. Recently we have been buying between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 of Mexican silver monthly. These are very substantial sums which Mexico will undoubtedly miss if the Townsend bill should pass.

If the Mexican government showed any disposition to grant return favors, or even to accord reasonably fair treatment to Americans with interests in the country, there would be regret over the incidental injury to this neighbor resulting from stoppage of silver buying. But in view of Mexico's confiscation of American-owned railroad, oil, agrarian and other properties, estimated to be worth over $1,000,000,000, our sympathies are dulled.

Perhaps loss of the benefits resulting from our silver buying might even cause Mexico to consider the advisability of making a few concessions in return for bounties received, and in the hope of more to come.

Opening Wedge

The House Veterans Committee has approved a bill providing pensions for dependent widows, parents and orphaned children of World War veterans who die of ailments not connected with war service. If this bill should pass, as predicted by Chairman Rankin of the Veterans Committee, it would bring us a step nearer to that system of general pensions for all veterans and their wives which is the goal of the pension drive.

The cost of such a general pension system would be staggeringly high and would remain so for many years to come. But it is not necessary to anticipate the future in order to condemn the singling out of dependents of World War veterans for preferential treatment.

The families of men who die from causes connected with their service are, of course, entitled to special consideration. The Government has recognized its obligation in that respect and dealt most generously with these unfortunates. For the great majority of veterans, however, war service was no handicap and to some extent it helped them to provide for their dependents. At any rate, surviving dependents, whatever their financial position, are no more a responsibility of the Government than thousands of other Americans in need of public assistance.

The Federal Government is expending about $550,000,000 yearly for veterans' pensions and benefits. In addition it is contributing several hundreds of millions to the States in the form of grants-in-aid to provide pensions for the needy aged, for maternal and child welfare and for dependent children. These outlays are exclusive of the insurance benefits paid to the aged and the unemployed from the trust funds managed by the Government.

In other words, the Government is building up an extensive system of social security designed to provide for dependents of all classes. There is no justification whatever for making a distinction between the beneficiaries of this general program and the dependents of men who served in the World War without incurring injury of any kind.

Even if expense were no factor, the current proposal would stand condemned as unfairly discriminatory and as constituting a dangerous precedent.

We Have Them Here

Washingtonians will watch with interest the prosecution of four men arrested as loan sharks in New York. Unscrupulous lenders who exact as much as 360 per cent interest from borrowers in desperate need of money may be found in most parts of the country. New York is fortunate in being able to put them where they belong. In the District and a number of backward States this racket continues to exact its toll without effective check.

New York investigators have uncovered cases in which loan sharks are reported to have charged their victims 1 per cent a day for the use of money in relatively small amounts. Some borrowers were also induced to sign checks dated on the due date of their loans and to make false affidavits that they had bank balances from which such checks could be paid. These documents gave the loan sharks the evidence they needed to threaten borrowers with arrest for obtaining money under false pretenses if they failed to meet the lenders' exorbitant demands.

Some members of Congress may be shocked by the audacity of this racket in New York. But it is not essentially different from the illegal lending operations carried on regularly in Washington. The chief difference is that New York is meeting its problem, while the District is denied that privilege. A recent study of "Loan Sharks and Their Victims" by William Trufant Foster, published as a pamphlet by the Public Affairs Committee, lists New York among those States with effective regulation of the small-loans business. Washington falls into the category of jurisdictions with "largely or wholly inoperative laws."

Several courageous efforts have been made to change the District law forbidding interest rates above 12 per cent a year. It has been conclusively shown that this rate is too low to permit legitimate companies to operate—that it drives persons of small means who must have money into the entangling nets of loan sharks who may charge them from 10 to 30 times the legal rate. But Congress has taken a short-sighted view of the matter. The result is to give Washington's illegal lenders virtually a free hand in mulcting groups that are most in need of protection.

Russia's Veto

Belated efforts by Sweden and Norway to make a defensive alliance with Finland have encountered outspoken Russian objections.

The three Scandinavian countries have been considering pooling their strength in order to create a barrier against further aggressions in the north. But the Kremlin has vetoed that plan. Such a pact, says Moscow, would be in violation of the Russo-Finnish Treaty of March 12 and "aimed at the U. S. S. R."

It thus becomes obvious that in Russia's opinion the sovereignty of Finland is now more nominal than actual. It is like the sovereignty of Esthonia or Latvia, applying only to domestic policy.

The development is grimly ironic. It was the lack of effective solidarity among the Scandinavian nations which, as much as anything else, made it impossible for Finland to continue her heroic struggle against Russia. There was strong sentiment in Sweden in favor of military intervention on behalf of the sister democracy. But action to this end was rejected, as was also the suggestion of the Allies that they be permitted to use Norway and Sweden as a corridor for the transport of large-scale reinforcements to Finland.

Undoubtedly there were very pressing reasons why Sweden and Norway acted as they did. Certainly it would be the height of impropriety for any American to criticize the choice made by the Stockholm and Oslo governments. Nevertheless, the fact remains that when Finland was forced to capitulate, the sovereignty of that country, and also to some extent that of Sweden and Norway, was impaired.

Russia will not even permit them to lock the stable door after the horse has been stolen.

Blitzkrieg In Paris

From the Memphis Commercial Appeal

When the war began, we waited in ill-controlled apprehension for the belligerents to annihilate each the other with showers of bombs whistling down from clouds and flocks of airplanes. Nothing happened to the great cities and we gradually relaxed and finally grew reasonably serene in spirit. Here lately, though, it looks as if bad feeling is beginning to find its spiteful expression. At any rate, a Paris boulevardier has been knocked flat by a bundle of propaganda leaflets from which a Nazi pilot failed to remove the string. We trust that Field Marshal Col. Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, all his medals rattling as his chest heaved with indignation, has personally reproved his flier. Let this sort of carelessness reign unstopped and somebody is liable to get hurt.

Boys' "Mischief"

To the Editor of the Post—Sir:
My attention is called this morning to a letter in your interesting columns, by a William Lee, president of the Mount Pleasant Citizens Association, respecting the banditry and general destructiveness of boys of all ages. It is a letter and a subject which should have the utmost consideration on the part of the police and other law-enforcing officials in the city and suburbs.

Perhaps at no time in the past has there been such utter insubordination on the part of boys as we have today. We do not dare to leave our property unprotected even for a day without running the risk of having it destroyed. I have never been able to understand why the parents of such delinquents cannot be made to pay heavily for the destructive acts of their male children.

Even in this more quiet suburban place, more or less of this destruction goes on and I have been told by contractors who are building houses that even nailing up the unfinished homes when leaving them for the night is no protection and that when complaint is made to the mothers, where the culprit is known, she usually smiles feebly and asks if he "is doing that again"? And yet in the future, jail doors will open for such boys if they continue in their criminal disregard for the rights and properties of others. E. B. NEWMAN.

Police Jurisdiction

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
The Federal Police Force, with the Federal Works Agency, together with the police at the Library of Congress and Supreme Court and also the police employed at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, together with the Capitol Police Force, exceed in number the Metropolitan Police Force. Two-thirds of the Federal Police Force are off duty at all times and could render valuable assistance to the Metropolitan Police if they were allowed to wear their uniform and badges at all times.

Federal Police have no police power outside of Government buildings. It seems that the Metropolitan Police do not want the assistance of the Federal Police Force.

Twice during the past 12 months I witnessed serious violations of the law but could do nothing about it as my police power has been restricted to the Government buildings by request of the Metropolitan Police Department, this in spite of the fact that we seldom see a policeman in our neighborhood.

Local Veterans

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
It is with pleasure I send you a few lines of gratitude for the great help The Washington Post continues to be to the local veterans of the Forty-second (Rainbow) Division, American Expeditionary Forces, in publishing the news releases sent to it by our publicity officer. As a consequence we have gained in membership and our various activities are better attended. Not only do the membership of the District of Columbia Chapter, Rainbow Division Veterans, peruse your columns for news of its organization but so do Rainbowers in various States.

Miss Gibbon

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
The case of Martha Gibbon at George Washington University deserves much more publicity than The Post has thus far given to it. When hundreds of students and alumni organize to protest the resignation of Miss Gibbon as assistant professor of English, and to insist on a complete investigation of the circumstances which compelled her to take such action, it is clear that it is a matter with which a newspaper like The Post should concern itself.

As an alumnus of the university, I am anxious to know why Miss Gibbon should be forced to resign to avoid dismissal after 11 years of service. Her excellence as a teacher is acclaimed by students and colleagues alike and denied by no one.

I am anxious to know whether the apparent injustice in her case is proof of widely-repeated assertions that President Marvin has the George Washington University under his thumb, creating uncertainty and fear among his faculty and crushing anyone who happens to incur his personal disfavor. What irony if a university bearing the name of George Washington should be a petty dictatorship!

JACOB BERG.
Washington, March 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
In the face of the interest of many thousands of George Washington University students and alumni in the cause of Miss Martha Gibbon and her heroic fight in the interest of justice, it is difficult to understand the paucity of space which The Post has so far allotted to the championing of her noble effort.

Many friends of Miss Gibbon join me in the hope that you will gladly fight through with her until she has won her public-spirited and altruistic battle in the cause of justice. HAROLD J. SOTTER.
Washington, March 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
As a subscriber to your paper I wish to protest your neglect in failing to present the case of Miss Martha Gibbon's so-called resignation from the faculty of George Washington University. After 11 years of inspired teaching during which she has repeatedly been recommended for promotion by the heads of her department, Miss Gibbon was forced to resign when President Marvin refused to give her security of tenure.

This case is not only of interest to the students and alumni of George Washington University, many of whom have had personal contact with Miss Gibbon, but to all those people who cannot fail to be interested in the loss of so fine a teacher to one of the leading educational institutions in Washington. Spiritualism

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
I was greatly surprised to see published in The Post of March 20 an interview with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's son in which he attacks spiritualism and mediumship in the following statements:

"The powers of seership are spiritual in nature and have nothing to do with mediumship, which is psychic. I went through mediumship with my father when he was alive. Now I am studying seership, which is a further development. For both, he rejects the term 'spiritualism,' which reminds him of ghosts, clanking chains and fake mediums—something phoney, very far removed from the true facts."

In making such statements, in which he condemns the religion of Spiritualism as something phoney, reminding him of fake mediums, he is not following in his father's footsteps, for Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was an ardent defender of mediumship and a firm believer in spiritualism.

He speaks of the supreme advantages of seership, which is, of course, all right, but when he does so in order to discredit mediumship it is not only bad taste but an expression of ignorance; for every bit of evidence to substantiate survival after death has come, not through seership, but by spirit manifestation through mediumship.

Those who have investigated the religion of Spiritualism know it has nothing to do with either ghosts or clanking chains and as far as fake mediums are concerned, their number is small indeed in comparision with the honest and the true. Spiritualism has to do with the return and manifestation of the so-called dead, who come to comfort, enlighten and inspire their loved ones on earth.

ALFRED H. TERRY,
Pastor of the First Spiritualist Church.

Republican Leadership

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Your recent editorial regarding unemployment was good, in that you recognized the enormity of the problem. However, you failed to state a fact which is so often overlooked, that no matter whether there are two, five, seven or eight millions unemployed in the United States today, a big majority lost their jobs under a Republican Administration.

While the Democrats haven't put them all back to work, it must be remembered that Mr. Hoover handed Mr. Roosevelt quite a batch of jobless—possibly upward of 10,000,000—some estimates I have seen say 15,000,000. Also during New Deal regime possibly 5,000,000 heretofore too young to be considered have reached employable age and demand work.

Republican leadership has yet to repudiate Mr. Hoover's record. Messrs. Hamilton, Taft, Dewey and Vandenberg should tell the people whether Republicanism of today is Hooverless. I think Hoover still has a big voice in Republican councils and would have much influence with another Republican administration, even though he were not President.

Shall we go back to the political line-up that started the mighty tramp, tramp of the unemployed?

The World And Grandfather

My grandfather was an act of God fancier. Floods, tornadoes and hurricanes were his favorite topics of conversation, and he kept a canoe under the front porch for use in impromptu rescue work.

Earliest memory is his blood-and-thunder account of the big blow of '86. At the time my grandfather was working either in or around the railroad yards at Sayre, Pa. One summer day he was quietly caulking a hole in a locomotive boiler when the fabulous twister (of '86) hit the town of Sayre. My grandfather saw it coming. He climbed inside the boiler.

After that the story used to vary somewhat in the telling. The itinerary of the boiler with my grandfather inside was never the same, but always prodigious. Collected versions show the boiler on every street in Sayre and rolling over much of the surrounding territory. Grandfather is said to have emerged from the boiler in sufficiently good shape to begin telling the story after a short rest. Thereafter he told it on every occasion for roughly 50 years.

It was the first telling of it that got me. Psychologists would describe what happened to me as a fixation. At an early age I had to give up hopes of moving to Kansas, where there was more chance for tornadoes, but I could and did concentrate on flood possibilities.

Grandfather's personality was by no means limited to enthusiasm for disaster, however. The stories he told were only matched by stories told about him.

Religion was his great enthusiasm. He was a saintly man; no one doubted that. Still, his fervor was often a bit trying to members of the family who were somewhat more of this world.

Especially mother and especially "that once." The incident was always referred to as "that once" around the house since mother was touchy on the subject. I do not remember it. I was just a bit more than 1 year old at the time and very sick. Pneumonia it was, complicated with mastoid.

Doctors, they tell me, were consulting, and nurses were whispering "no change" with a catch in the voice. Mother was in a state. Dad stayed away from the office for a week and worried at home instead.

Grandfather just went around the house praying that I would die before I had a chance to commit any sins.

It was too much for mother. Even after I didn't die she refused to forgive grandfather. Only in later years, when I began running through some of the sins predicted, did she begin to thaw noticeably. Grandfather, always gracious, disclaimed credit. Merely a routine prediction, he would say; almost anyone could have done it.

Around the time of the '28 election grandfather began to show signs of impatience with the church to which he had belonged all his life. The trouble started when he read an article by one of its clergymen in which there was a broad hint that the Pope would not take over the country if Al Smith were elected.

That was heresy. Grandfather had been reading a little paper called The Pillar of Fire, put out by the sect of the same name (the one that is currently producing, in various pulpits, prohibition plays called "Snakes, He's Got 'Em." Their paper made grandfather feel like a liberal for just wanting Al defeated.

Grandfather went out of the house for the first time in two years and voted Republican. Then he came back and joined the Pillar of Fire.

In spite of a hole in his leg made by a minnie ball at Missionary Ridge, grandfather was a very active man. Summertimes he would climb the cherry tree in the back yard and pick cherries with the best of us. But that was as far as he would go.

For years he refused to go off our property, and usually he wouldn't even go outside the house. He hadn't been downtown in 20 years, not since the Great War.

Grandfather had never seen a movie. He didn't want to see a movie. Neither did he care to play the radio, fly in an airplane, or go up to the top of our tallest building (14 stories) in the elevator.

Modern improvements made no impression on the old gentleman. Even before 1929 he vigorously objected that they weren't improvements. Since then his school of thought has attracted some following, but at the time it was revolutionary and disrespectful to the chamber of commerce.

All modern gadgets merely bored grandfather; he was unimpressed. What he liked was a good three-hour speech with lantern slides after that. We could have Douglas Fairbanks and grandfather would willingly throw in Rudolf Valentino.

This comparatively mild opposition was as nothing compared to his opinion of the automobile. Automobiles were not only dangerous they were softening the people, and they weren't doing the younger generation any good.

Grandfather was not entirely unbiased in this; he had been a carriage maker. He didn't mind competition, but he wanted it fair and square. That the automobile was not.

We never managed to coax grandfather into the family car, but he did seem sometimes a little wistful. Once he almost gave way, but the speed held him back. Grandfather had stayed away from cars too long.

While he had been waging his losing fight against automobiles they were getting faster and faster. Consequently he wasn't broken in at all. He would have had to start right out at high speeds. That grandfather refused to do when in his opinion 10 miles per hour was a nice brisk pace.

Lately, however, the truth about grandfather has been dawning upon me. Grandfather was last century's. Religious, he was perfectly calm when dealing with floods, the reverse when faced by a gasoline motor. He thought modern machines were sins against nature and would do us no good.

Grandfather may have been behind the times.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

Mail Order March

SINCLAIR LEWIS, whose new novel is appearing tomorrow, wrote a foreword to David L. Cohn's distillation, "The Good Old Days: A History of American Morals and Manners as Seen Through the Sears, Roebuck Catalogues From 1905 to the Present" (Simon & Schuster, $3.75), and in it he says, and says better, most of what any reviewer wants to say about the book. (And since Mr. Lewis' book will inevitably sweep the columns tomorrow, Mr. Cohn's publishers request the critics to review his book today, though avid purchasers will have to wait Friday to find it in the bookstores.)

"It may be that the permanence of such institutions as Dickens," says Mr. Lewis, "is due to their recording not the dreary magnificances of coronations and battles, but instead the dear diminutive excitements in commonplace characters which make us identify ourselves with them: what they eat, with what weapons, exactly, they kill one another, and the precise wording of the acid pomposity with which a duke or a dustman complains of his breakfast porridge. Mankind is always more interested in living than in Lives. Mr. David Cohn . . . has in this column stolen the novelist's tricks complete."

That Farmers' Bible, that Nation's Wishbook, the mail-order catalogue, is, as Mr. Cohn says of it, "a charming, sometimes picturesque, naive, and often moving, account of how millions of pain folk have lived for five decades. It is a vast archeological museum." I have always been proud that my only personal contribution to the World's Fair of last summer was the suggestion that the ridiculous Time Capsule, which was to be buried for rediscovery in 6939, should contain as one of its exhibits of our present-day civilization, a microfilm of a Sears catalogue. No other book approaches it as a mirror of American civilization.

MR. COHN HAS combed the catalogues of 1905, 1915, 1925, 1935 and 1939, and distilled from them his portrait of the changing U. S. A.; he is amazed at the changes he observes. Those catalogues have recorded a dozen revolutions—Mr. Cohn notes the two greatest as those associated with the automobile and with contraceptives. The only reference to automobiles in the 1905 catalogue was a book called "Horseless Vehicles, Automobiles and Motor Cycles," by Gardner D. Hiscox, M. E. (The first cars appeared in 1908.) That 1905 catalogue sketched and advertised for sale "White Duck Emigrant Wagon Covers" of many sizes; they did not, indeed, entirely disappear from the catalogue until 1924. Contraceptives did not appear until 1925.

Music? In 1905, Sears, Roebuck devoted four pages to pianos and 15 to parlor organs, ranging in price from $19.90 to $51.95; not an organ was left in the catalogue of 1925 . . . Guitars had six pages in 1905, one in 1925 and 1935. The top price for a harmonica in 1905 was $11.65; by 1935 they ranged up to $325. The graphophones of 1905 all had horns, and most had cylinder records. Disks, however, were coming in; one very fine disk recorded "Cummings' Indian Congress at Coney Island" and was described as "Grand entree of the Indians and Mexicans, preceded by the Carlisle Indian Band, Princess Wininah, the champion rifleshot of the world, Indian sham battle and realistic scene introducing the war song, the attack of the Mexicans, etc." You could hardly match that today.

1915	27
1925	12

Mr. Cohn refuses to be consoled by the radios, which began appearing in the catalogue about 1920.

SO MR. COHN ranges the pastures of American life—from the solid gold toothpick with ear spoon combined, the two-color Bible, the linen automobile dusters, the New Acme Queen Cathedral Gong Clock, magic lanterns, stretchy-seam men's drawers, superfine muslin nightshirts, handpower washing machines, and antique-finished ice boxes to the modern automobile tire, larger, stronger and cheaper than its predecessor, and the women's hats of today. One trusts this picture, for, as Mr. Cohn says, "the catalogue never leads; never crusades." It records what astute businessmen had reason to believe millions of Americans would want."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Word And Deed

HOW WE HAVE talked of freedom!
How we have all proclaimed
What must be done to keep it
Bright in a deathless flame!
How we have talked of horror,
Justice and truth and pride . . .
We merely talked, but Finland
Went to the bat and died.

"Wrong cannot be condoned"—
"Ruthlessness must be halted"—
This we have heard intoned:
Platitudes we have shouted
While Finland bravely stood
Giving her very utmost,
There in her own red blood.

"Borders must be respected"—
"Strong must respect the weak;"
"Bullies just know they dare not Scatter and scourge the meek;"
"Fairness must be triumphant"—
This have the nations cried . . .
Meanwhile the Finns were marching
Forth to be crucified!

"Honor must stay unsullied"—
"Forces of evil must Learn they can't drag a nation's Flag in the muck and dust;"
"Justice is ever sacred"—
These are the things we've said;
Finland alone proclaimed it
Over the heaped-up dead!

"Dearer than life is honor"—
"Truth is a holy thing
To which we all must ever
Tightly and bravely cling;"
Thus have the talkers shouted
Firmly, 'til out of breath . . .
Finland went forth to claim it
Down to the bitter death.

"Man must oppose enslavement"—
"Freedom's a noble cause"—
"Greed mustn't win the battle"—
"This is a world of laws" . . .
Easily have we prattled,
Flinging the platitudes—
Finland died as she listened
Out in the red-stained woods.

A Delayed Denial

By Ernest Lindley

Its Significance

WHAT IS THE political significance of the President's delayed denial of the account of a conversation between him and a Democratic "stalwart" published in this column more than two weeks ago?

Is he opposed to Cordell Hull as his successor? Is he against Robert H. Jackson as Hull's running mate? Does he favor Jim Farley as a Vice Presidential candidate on a ticket headed by Hull? Or has he made up his mind to run for a third term?

First, as to Hull: The President has discussed the availability of Hull as a Presidential nominee with numerous persons in his official family, in Congress, in Democratic State organizations and in private life. He has evinced no high enthusiasm for Hull as a Presidential nominee, but has intimated repeatedly that, when all practical factors are considered, Hull is probably the strongest available candidate.

Hull could be nominated with ease. He would satisfy most of the conservative Southern Democrats, and has a considerable conservative following in the North. Although not a New Dealer, he has not been identified with the opposition to the New Deal. (Having been Roosevelt's chief Cabinet officer for seven years, he could not be). Yet, having had no personal responsibility for any of the New Deal domestic experiments, he could not be attacked on their account.

The wars abroad are a strong argument for his nomination. With the President, he is responsible for the conduct of our foreign policy in a way which seems to be overwhelmingly popular and trusted. His election would assure continuity in our foreign policy. With the possible exception of Hoover, who suffers from other handicaps, the Republican Party can offer no candidate who can compare with Hull in experience in foreign affairs.

Hull has his political liabilities, and also perhaps personal reasons for not aspiring to the Presidential nomination. But the nomination is an honor and a responsibility which no man can afford to shun for personal reasons.

SECONDLY, as to Jackson: His ability and liberal outlook make him the personal preference for the Presidential nomination of many of the New Dealers, and perhaps of the President. If Hull heads the ticket, the nomination of a stanch liberal who would appeal to the labor, relief and miscellaneous progressive vote would become politically desirable, perhaps indispensable. On the basis of reliable information, the Hull-Jackson combination has been written about by most of the political correspondents in Washington at intervals during the last three months.

Thirdly, as to Farley: His candidacy for the national ticket this year is of long standing. His assets and liabilities as a Presidential nominee have been discussed up and down and around by probably every Democratic politician, professional and amateur, in the country.

His assets are many. His political handicaps are three: An identification with machine politics, which ordinarily tends to repel independent voters. A rather conservative outlook. His religion.

When practical politicians discuss a candidate they appraise the probable effects of his religion quite as objectively as they do his attributes and associations. Roosevelt has discussed the Farley candidacy with many people, including the late Cardinal Mundelein. To imagine that he has done so without reference to Farley's religion is to imply the preposterous: that Roosevelt is not a practical politician. Unfortunately, as has been shown by the recent experience of this column, when the language of practical politicians is put into print it can be misinterpreted to impute religious prejudice to those who are completely free of it and eager to overcome it.

IF BALANCED BY a suitable running mate Farley's liabilities might well become assets. Hull and Farley together, however, would be a straight conservative Democratic ticket. As to how much actual or potential religious prejudice remains in this country, opinions differ. The happy consensus among most practical politicians with whom I have discussed the matter is that there is much less than there was in 1928. The consensus also is that whatever prejudice survives would be felt by a Catholic nominated for Vice President on a ticket with an elderly man just about as heavily as by one nominated for the Presidency.

In my column of January 3 I wrote:

"The Roosevelt-Farley relationship remains extremely poignant. By normal political standards, Farley deserves the Vice Presidency, at least, on the 1940 ticket. Moreover, he will have some delegates and great influence in the convention. But the President, in his recent conversations, has made it plain that he does not regard Jim as a desirable nominee for Vice President—at least not as the running mate for the conservative and elderly Cordell Hull. Roosevelt would not have the cold blood to say as much to Farley's face . . ."

With a Presidential nominee young and more progressive than Hull, Farley might be almost the ideal man for second place. (This column, incidentally, would gladly vote for him for first place.)

Finally, has Roosevelt made up his mind to run for a third term? The quickest answer is: Nobody knows, but he still talks and acts as if he would not unless the European situation took a sharp turn for the worse.

SECRETARY HULL

Does the President really consider Mr. Hull to be "probably the strongest available candidate?" See Ernest Lindley's analysis of the President's denial of statements attributed to him by Mr. Lindley

Prelude To Action

By Barnet Nover

The Allies Grow Restless

WHEN SUMNER WELLES sailed from Genoa for New York this week he carried away from Europe the clearest picture of Allied and German war aims vouchsafed to any one man. And he left behind whatever hope of a negotiated peace his mission had inspired.

There is little doubt that, for a time at least, the German government regarded the Welles mission as a splendid opportunity to revive Hitler's peace offensive, this time with the unwitting support of the United States.

Not that President Roosevelt or Mr. Wellles ever for a moment entertained the idea of pulling Hitler's chestnuts out of the fire. That was probably the furthest from their thoughts. But the dispatch of the Undersecretary to Europe at a time when a large body of American opinion was vociferously clamoring for a peace on almost any terms, and when the tide of sentiment against Great Britain was rising in this country as a result of many pinpricks, could so be and was so interpreted in Europe.

BY THE SAME TOKEN, however, the British and French were and almost to the last remained suspicious of the Welles mission. It put them on the spot. The very revival of peace talk which the announcement of the mission spontaneously generated throughout the world was a real embarrassment to them. It created difficulties for the London and Paris governments, both at home and abroad. And the Allies feared that outright rejection of what might be made to appear a reasonable peace offer by Hitler would further alienate American public opinion.

Nor did the coincidence of the Welles mission with the closing days of the Russo-Finnish War help matters much for the Allies. For by seeming to increase the odds against an Allied victory it made any settlement appear advisable, at least in the eyes of the neutrals.

As it happened, neither the British nor the French governments showed the slightest intentions of accepting peace on Hitler's terms. And the determination of those governments to continue the war reflected the feeling of the British and French peoples.

THERE IS A belief prevalent in this country that Europe went to war solely because the governments willed it. That happens to be true of Germany. It is not at all true of Great Britain and France. In their case the governments went to war because the people willed it and pushed them into it.

After all the governments in power in London and Paris in September, 1938, were the same governments, except for minor changes in personnel, as the governments that had made the Munich Settlement. The Daladier and Chamberlain regimes had for a long time pursued a hesitant and cautious policy. They had done so because they detested war and were determined, so far as humanly possible, to prevent it. To that end they made enormous sacrifices for peace. But these sacrifices proved to be wholly in vain. And public opinion in both democracies became convinced that no further sacrifices of that kind were to be made.

IT WAS the disgust of the man in the street in Great Britain and France with the Munich settlement that was primarily responsible for the action of the Allies in going to war on Germany. It is public opinion which is driving the British and French governments into more vigorous war policy. So far as Great Britain and France are concerned, Munich is as dead as Versailles.

An Italian newspaper, Resto del Carlino of Bologna describes the resignation of Premier Daladier as a "battle won by Germany." This is wishful thinking. To say that is equivalent to having said in September, 1917, that the replacement of Paul Painleve by Georges Clemenceau as French premier was a "German victory."

Paul Reynaud has for long been an ardent opponent of the Munich policy. He stands for the most vigorous possible prosecution of the war. He is opposed, as Edouard Daladier was equally opposed, to a negotiated peace that would leave Hitler in possession of his gains and in a position, after a few months of uncertain peace, to launch a Blitzkrieg against the demobilized Allies. And the same desire for action that was behind the replacement of Daladier by Raynaud is to be found in Great Britain. There Neville Chamberlain remains master of the situation. But a shake-up in the cabinet is imminent.

Popular impatience with the "sit-down war" may lead the French and British governments to undertake ill-considered ventures that may prove disastrous. That is a real danger. But, in the meantime it is of more than passing significance that the most serious defeat suffered by the Allies since Poland was overrun, namely, the collapse of Finland, far from wrecking the morale of the British and French people has only resulted in increasing their determination to fight it out.

Those Peace Proposals Again

The Big Mystery Of the Eleven Points

By Dorothy Thompson

THE 11-POINT peace proposals that issued so mysteriously from the Vatican a few days ago have been universally repudiated by everyone except the American correspondent who cabled them. Washington has denied that Mr. Welles had anything to do with them. Rome and Berlin, Paris and London, all deny them. Mr. Chamberlain's speech and the shake-up in the Paris cabinet all indicate that war, not peace, is on the calendar. For certainly a Reynaud-Daladier cabinet, excluding the well-known appeaser, Bonnet, and including three Socialists, is the nearest thing to a government of national concentration that France has yet had, and it is a strong government. The more vigorous prosecution of the war, not the opposite, is indicated.

NEVERTHELESS, I think we shall hear of these peace terms again. No one knows who planted them, but they were not a secret long before they came out. New York bankers with correspondents abroad have been talking about a proposed peace for the last month and hinting that it would offer terms so reasonable that it would be difficult to reject them. Furthermore, although Mr. Welles' visit to Europe was undoubtedly partly for reasons of domestic politics and partly of a purely informative nature, the President intended to sound out the possibility of a negotiated peace and if terms could be obtained from Germany that might be the basis of negotiations, to call a conference of neutrals to demand peace.

The time between the termination of the Finnish war and the meeting of Mussolini and Hitler at the Brenner has been, undoubtedly, the most critical week since the beginning of the war. Several facts emerged when the noise of battle died down on the Russo-Finnish front which matter greatly to the situation of Europe. One is the strength and importance of the Russian army, about which most journalists, including this columnist, have been ill-informed. It is a factor to be reckoned with, and a big factor.

The success of Russia has thrown a scare into conservative neutral, Allied and German ranks and revived the perennial hope in those ranks of bringing Germany into camp through a negotiated peace, and turning against the "real" enemy—Russia. And the 11 points represent the sort of compromise that might be hoped for if these elements were successful.

They contain a little bit of everybody's program; the restoration of some sort of independent Poland and Czecho-Slovakia, to save the faces of the Allies, the latter, however, to be allied with Germany, who before the war began made it clear—in private conversations which took place between Chamberlain and Goering via intermediaries—that Germany would never really relinquish Czecho-Slovakia; a Danubian confederation, under the guardianship of Italy and Germany (which would please the Vatican); absolute freedom of religion in Germany (Vatican plus Roosevelt); emigration of all remaining Jews from Germany with the assistance of Britain, France and Italy (very satisfactory to the Nazis, and only a new horrible problem for the Jews, whom every one can always gang up against for the sake of peace); liberty of trade, no hindrance to the exchange of raw materials, economic collaboration with the United States (Mr. Hull and reciprocal trade); satisfaction of Italian interests in Djibouti, Suez, French North Africa and Tunisia; return of German colonies, in the course of time.

HERBERT L. MATTHEWS

Who and what were behind his peace story from Rome?

THESE TERMS represent the program of international industrialists and right-wing politicians in most countries. Whether they were ever advanced by Germany at all is still an open question, and if they were so advanced, whether they were ever seriously meant is another. The crusade against the Soviet Union that was one of the points in the list of 11 given out by Mr. Matthews and appeared nowhere else, is certainly in the minds of the international groups who are back of some such peace as this. The difficulty is that you cannot have a crusade against the Soviet Union unless you first have peace, and you will not get the masses to go to war against the Soviet Union on the side of Hitler after a peace has been made.

There is no doubt that the repercussions of the Finnish settlement go down through the whole of eastern Europe. King Carol's reconciliation with the Iron Guard in Rumania can only mean that the King is retreating from any reliance upon Britain and France and, at the same time, attempting to strengthen his position in any negotiations he may have to make with the Soviet Union.

We shall probably hear from Berlin any moment that some sort of arrangement has been made among Italy, Germany and Soviet Russia, but it will doubtless be confined to attempting to maintain peace in eastern Europe and the Balkans. In this case, a vigorous war on the Eastern Front, as envisaged by certain strategists in London and Paris, might be stalemated.

INDEED, although the more vigorous war, on the part of the Allies, is contemplated, it can only be in the way of greater efficiency and a more rapid speeding up of organization, armament and industrial production. The Allies cannot take a major offensive yet, and the Germans almost certainly will not. The war, therefore, will probably continue for some time to be a war of politics and nerves, except for the air.

WHAT THE MAKERS of various negotiated peace proposals fail to take into account is that any compact made between democratic and totalitarian states must, by the nature of the two sorts of organization, be a victory for the totalitarian powers.

Who Was Trying To Make Another Munich?

The totalitarian powers would dominate any combination they might enter, in the same way that the Communists in the United States dominate any liberal organizations that they enter.

The totalitarian states have their own rules, and these take precedence over any other rules that they may, for opportunist reasons, temporarily adopt. They are authoritarian, and every citizen is pledged to blind obedience. They, therefore, retain, of their nature, the power of the coup d'etat whenever one contemplates an alliance with or a compact between states that have political freedom and states despotically ruled with the assistance of a single party, one needs to recall the history of the Nazi Revolution inside Germany.

It was a minority which immediately made itself into a majority when it was once in power, even though it shared the power with others. It immediately, however, employed its minority power in a manner which the majority could not, by their structure or by their principles, use.

A state with political freedom can no more exist in a compact with another state that rejects it, than a state organized for peace and unwilling to use war can exist as the neighbor of a state organized for war and prepared to risk it. That is why a European peace concluded with totalitarian powers means a totalitarian Europe. Only a totalitarian France and a totalitarian England might be safe for a while with a totalitarian Germany.

2 Arraigned In Alexandria After Raid

Culpeper County Men Are Released On Bond, Charged With Running Still

Two Culpeper County men, seized in a raid by Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control agents and county officials on Wednesday, were held for action of a Federal grand jury on arraignment before Commissioner John W. Monroe, jr., in the United States Court at Alexandria yesterday.

The two men, Josh Hitt, 65, of Boston, Va., and Squire Slaughter, colored, 24, of Novun, Va., were arrested when the agents raided a still in the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains and confiscated 15 gallons of sugar whisky. The still, a steam-operated plant of 55-gallon capacity, and apparently a relic of pre-repeal days, was confiscated along with a quantity of liquor mash.

Both men were charged with possession of a still and mash, and illegal manufacture of whisky.

Following the arraignment proceedings, Commissioner Monroe released the pair under Hitt's personal bond in the amount of $250. The grand jury will convene in Alexandria next June.

O. E. S. Installation

The new officers are Mrs. Estelle Davis, worthy matron; Andrew Yates, worthy patron; Mrs. Carolyn, Noble, associate matron; Bedford K. Smith, associate patron; Mrs. Arlene Wakeman, conductress; Mrs. Ethel Stone, associate conductress; Mrs. Helen B. Nalls, secretary; Mrs. Lucille Batchellor, treasurer; Mrs. Mamie Roberts, chaplain; Mrs. Vivian Edmonston, marshal; Mrs. Jessie Skidmore, organist; Mrs. Ida Sherwood, warder, and Thomas E. Mills, sentinel.

112 Numbers Arrests

Alexandria's drive on operators of the numbers racket brought three convictions in police court yesterday, and resulted in the arrest of two more alleged operators, bringing the total of gambling arrests to eight in the last four days.

Fines totaling almost $800 and suspended jail sentences amounting to 42 months, were assessed against the trio who appeared in court yesterday. All three were convicted of violating both State and city ordinances.

Azelle Harris, 36, colored, and Lewis Monroe, 30, who were arrested in a raid on the 300 block of North Henry street, were given identical sentences. Both were fined $300 and costs and given suspended sentences of 90 days on the city charge, and fines of $5.00 and costs and 12-month suspended sentences on the State violations.

John Sheppard, 31, colored, arrested in a raid on the 800 block of Queen street, was fined $150 and costs on the city charge, and fined $500 and costs and given a suspended term of 12 months on the State violation.

The two persons arrested later yesterday were taken in custody following a raid on the 500 block of Queen street. Arresting officers were Sergt. Joseph Butler and Officers George Embrey, John Kelley and William Bayliss.

Chicken Thieves Hunted

Alexandria and Fairfax County police joined forces yesterday in a campaign against a ring of chicken thieves, believed responsible for the loss of more than 150 chickens in the past two weeks. Numerous thefts have been reported in the eastern section of the county, and in the outlying sections of Alexandria, Lieut. Edgar Simms said.

Alexandria officers were spurred to action yesterday by a report submitted by Mrs. Nannie Ludlow, of the 2800 block of Duke street, complaining of the theft of 26 of her choice broilers from her hen house sometime Thursday morning. It was the third report in as many days received by the department.

500 Attend Centennial Fete Of St. Mary's Female Seminary

Costumes, Colonial Tea Depict Early History Of Junior College; Pageant in June To End Institution's Celebration

By the Associated Press

St. Marys City, Md., March 21.—One hundred years ago today Gov. William Grason of Maryland signed a legislative measure creating St. Mary's Female Seminary.

Today more than 500 visitors and alumnae came to the campus and paid tribute to the long, hard struggle past and present school authorities faced to bring the institution to its present esteemed rating.

A colonial tea in the afternoon high-lighted the day's ceremonies.

Student hostesses costumed in the picturesque colonial dress of 1840 served and escorted the visitors about the campus, which now contains eight buildings.

St. Mary's survived some troublesome times before attaining its present status as a junior college.

Once, soon after opening as an exclusive school for "females," shocked Maryland mothers withdrew their innocent daughters and forced the seminary to close when it was discovered the man in charge hit the bottle a bit too freely.

Two women were appointed soon after to superintend the school jointly, and the trouble from that source ended.

Financial difficulties beset the school for many years, but it struggled on. Real State aid did not come until 1937, when St. Mary's finally won a place on the Maryland educational budget.

Fire leveled the main buildings in 1924, and students camped out in temporary barracks while Miss M. Adele France, president and chief administrative officer, went ahead with reconstruction plans.

In addition to the eight buildings now in use, the Legislature has agreed to construct a new, modern gymnasium.

Miss France said the centennial celebration would be concluded in June during the three-day commencement exercises.

The program will include an elaborate pageant showing the 100 years of the school's history.

Quarry Workers, Grin, Solve Blast 'Mystery'

Charlottesville, Va., March 21 (AP). The origin of the blasts that thundered through the Charlottesville area was deep—but not mysterious.

Vote Buyer Is Sentenced To Six Months

Md. Chiropodist Also Is Fined $500; Appeal Filed

By the Associated Press

Salisbury, Md., March 21.—Chief Judge Benjamin A. Johnson sentenced Dr. Albert M. Segall to serve six months in prison and fined him $500 today, less than 24 hours after the Salisbury chiropodist had been convicted of violating the State Corrupt Practices Act.

Attorneys for Segal, who was accused of attempting to influence the selection of a Congressional nominee, filed an appeal and $2,000 bail was set.

The court rebuked the defense for charging at Segall's trial yesterday that "the wrong man is on trial," and claiming that the defendant was the victim of a political plot.

The chiropodist was convicted on four counts of promising money to Albert Coulbourne, Worcester County Democratic central committeeman, if he would vote for State Senator Dudley G. Roe, of Sudlersville for the First District Congressional nomination at the State party convention last May 11. Roe was opposed by David J. Ward, of Salisbury, now First District Congressman.

Referring to defense charges during the trial that Segall was the victim of a political plot, Judge Johnson said, in passing sentence: "We refrained from saying anything because we were afraid the jurors might draw the conclusion that we believed you guilty."

The prosecution likewise remained silent during the defense accusation.

"In view of the fact that no objection was made," Johnson continued, "we refrained to an extent almost unprecedented for us. That argument defamed everybody's character."

The chief judge, who tried the case with Judge T. Sangston Insley, pointed out that the grand jury had investigated the bribery reports last September and had reported that only Segall had been connected with the charges.

Annapolis, March 21.—Floats depicting historical scenes in Maryland have been entered in the Ritchie highway celebration parade April 27 by Eastern Shore and Western Maryland counties.

Washington County will have a float showing the first rural free delivery service. Worcester County plans an entry depicting the birth of Presbyterianism in the United States.

Other counties which have entered floats are Somerset, Caroline, Garrett and Baltimore. Micomico and Allegany counties and Baltimore City have floats under consideration.

The local committee is seeking to have every county represented in the dedication celebration parade, which will also feature hunt clubs from all over the State with their hounds, high school children in a minuet exhibition, and street dancing. All historical homes in the city will be opened for the event.

The solemn ceremonies of dedication for the memorial to the late Gov. Albert Cabell Ritchie on an eminence overlooking the Severn River will precede the civic celebration by a day.

Finland Drawing New Defense Lines, Says Procope

Richmond, Va., March 21 (AP).—Terming the Russo-Finnish treaty "a tremendously hard blow to a nation which never demanded anything from others," Hjalmar J. Procope, Finnish Minister to the United States, asserted the treaty "shall not be a new Munich."

Procope, addressing a banquet held last night in connection with a conference of bankers of the Fifth Federal Reserve District, declared "there are new defense lines in Finland and Finland, if attacked in the future, will protect her rights and independence."

"Although Finland now has been forced to make peace on hard conditions," the Finnish Minister said, "she has, in any case, through her fight, and through her sacrifices, saved her independence. She has given renewed proof that a small nation can resist aggression, and can do her duty toward the common cause of humanity."

Schools outnumbered other types of structures in the building program, nine new ones being built and 386 being modernized.

Montgomery Jury Lauded For Industry

Judge Praises Body For Getting to Work, Omitting Useless Building Inspections

The Montgomery County grand jury departed from precedent yesterday and was commended by Judge Charles W. Woodward in County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md., for the departure.

For the first time in the memory of court attaches, the grand jury contented itself with inspecting the jail as required by law and omitted visiting the county buildings and other county enterprises.

When the grand jury presented its report yesterday, Judge Woodward pointed out that visiting the buildings other than the jail is a "useless custom" since the grand jury has no power to criticize. Criticism of the conduct of the buildings could be stricken from the report, the judge pointed out.

Judge Woodward commended the body for getting down to business and finishing its work without any useless expenditure of effort.

The grand jury reported it had examined 81 witnesses in 38 presentments and had returned 35 indictments. It suggested that cell doors in the county jail be remodeled to open inward instead of out as a protection to wardens.

Beetle Quarantine May Extend to W. Va.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Winchester, Va., March 21.—Nearby Jefferson County, W. Va., embracing the area from Harpers Ferry to Charles Town and the Clarke County line, apparently is the next area slated for regulations imposed as a result of the Japanese beetle, a conference held here indicated.

C. W. Stockwood, of Bloomfield, N. J., chief representative of the Federal Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, said if the plan meets approval of West Virginia authorities, a highway beetle inspection station now at Harpers Ferry, will be moved during the coming season to Gaylord, Va., just inside the Virginia line.

Shenandoah Schools to Get A State Loan

Partial Aid Conditioned On County's Raising Additional Funds

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., March 21.—Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, said today the State would advance Shenandoah County $2,475 to help keep its schools open for the full nine-month term if the county would provide the necessary additional funds and also agree to provide sufficient revenue for a full-length term in 1940-41.

Dr. Hall said he asked the Shenandoah authorities to advise the State board of education of their action before the board's meeting here Friday.

County authorities had indicated that unless additional funds were made available the public schools would have to close at the end of this month.

Dr. Hall said the amount which he conditionally had agreed the State would make available was half the amount the county had requested.

C. V. Shoemaker, Shenandoah superintendent of schools, said the school board would face an estimated deficit of $13,589 after the supervisors transferred $5,556 as requested in the budget for last year. The advance from the State would reduce the deficit to $11,114. The school authorities have requested the supervisors to authorize them to borrow the remainder to keep the schools open until June.

The superintendent said an opinion requested from Attorney General A. P. Staples indicated this procedure would be legal.

Kaleidoscopic Views of Jimmy Fidler's Galaxy

Columnist's 'Parade' Enlists Film Notables; Three Items From The Playwrights' Company; Robert Speaight Plays Thomas a Becket Sunday

By Richard L. Coe,
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell

THAT HOWLING MOB yesterday afternoon at the Carlton was a group of Hollywood starlets, a slice of press and radio folk panting for a story. With six film stars and a widely-syndicated columnist in the room, there would have to be a story.

Not a single story could we complete in the convivial throng of Jimmy Fidler and his "Hollywood on Parade" group, opening a week of stage appearances on the Capitol stage this morning. What we did catch, though, were kaleidoscopic vignettes of Jimmy, Olympe Bradna, Helen Mack, Edith Fellows, Mary Healy, Michael Whalen and Peter Lind Hayes.

Poor Edith Fellows. She's too young to appear on the Capitol stage after 7 of an evening, too old to attend the Easter Egg rolling on the White House lawn without blushing. Edith, 16, is the baby of the troup, but she doesn't look it. She seems far older in person than on the screen in the popular "Five Little Peppers" series and with 12 years of theatrical experience behind her, she's more at home on the stage than anyone else in the group. She's cute as a button, to recall an FDRism, and has her grandmother with her.

Between Edith and Peter Lind Hayes there is a mutual admiration entente. She thinks Peter's imitations are the most elegant things on earth and he thinks Edith is just perfect. (Aside to Hollywood syndicated writers: There is no romance here.) Grace Hayes' son declares that on their final night in New York, when Tony Martin, Milton Berle, George Jessel, the inimitable Hartmans and the marvelous DeMarcos wished Jimmy's gang bon voyage, that it was Edith who got all the applause.

Helen Mack is hardly the girl you would expect to be so adept at jumping out of a window as she did so dramatically in "His Girl Friday." That brunette pint is chirp as a bird, energetic as a Roosevelt and a knockout at private imitations. She and roommate Mary Healy, kid each other to their faces, praise each other in quiet.

Mary Healy's socko hit as a songstress in the Rudy Vallee film, "Second Fiddle," still has her amazed. She just can't believe anyone would want to hear her sing. She may not have sung yesterday afternoon, but she did look. It's a winning smile the lass has, quite as fetching as she was in that Twentieth Century-Fox film.

Michael Whalen is the tall, dark handsome one of the group. Hemmed in by three of the lovelies, he seemed to us a lucky gentleman with courtly manners and a rich speaking voice—when we could hear him.

Olympe Bradna, and of course you know how to pronounce her name, is as pert as she appears on the silver sheet. There was very little we could get out of her except that when one fun-loving drama desk passed her brandy and soda instead of ginger ale, the gal knew it two feet away.

So that's the party. If Jimmy's boys and girls are as much fun on stage as on party, Capitol audiences are in for some fun.

The Playwrights Company's Mr. Bill Fields arrived in town with three pieces of news. First is that Robert E. Sherwood's new drama, which Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne will bring to the National the week of April 22, is no longer called "Revelation." That title came from the Book of Revelation which is the source of the new name: "There Shall Be No Night." Chapter 22 it is that closes: "And there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord giveth them light; and they shall reign for ever and ever." The story, you may recall, is of modern Finland.

Item two is in a cheerful note to our ailing and sadly missed Nelson B. Bell. In it Mr. Fields tells of dining Wednesday evening in New York with Cornelia Otis Skinner, who regretted not having written Mr. Bell how much she missed him a few weeks ago. But Miss Skinner had good reason for her letter-lapse. Her husband has been seriously ill. After a leg amputation, he is considerably better, but it is a grief of which her many admirers will be saddened to learn.

Item three on the Fields calender is the success of Elmer Rice's play of love young love in Manhattan. "Two on an Island" that would be, strikingly set by Jo Mielziner. It is one of the things to see in New York these days and a possible visitor to our town on a promised road tour.

FOUND: A successor to the National's imminent tenant, John Garfield's new play, "Heavenly Express." That would be for the week of April 1 and is the Chicago company of Clare Boothe's "Margin for Error," which opened its prosperous life in our town to the particular cheers of this department's regular conductor.

Robert Speaight's appearance at Catholic University in his celebrated role of Thomas a Becket in T. S. Eliot's "Murder in the Cathedral" will be a notable occasion. The English actor created the role at the premiere in the Chapter House of Canterbury Cathedral in 1935 and subsequently played it for almost 800 times in Great Britain. In this country, he has played the role only in Boston and New York. With students of the Speech and Drama Department of Catholic University under Father Gilbert V. Hartke in the supporting cast, Mr. Speaight will open a five-night run in the play at the University Theater on the campus Sunday evening.

FLASHES: Tomorrow morning at the Bethesda Theater at 10 o'clock and Monday morning in Magruder Park, Hyattsville, are the dates for the annual Easter egg hunts sponsored by theater magnate Sidney Lust.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 21 (INS). The hatchet has been officially buried between Olivia de Havilland and Warner Brothers and Olivia is being welcomed back on the lot as if nothing happened. She paid Hal Wallis a visit yesterday and she is very happy over his selection of "Episode" for her, which she starts in two weeks with Kurt Bernhard, a German director, megaphoning.

LOUELLA PARSONS

"Episode," you may remember, was bought for Kay Francis some years ago after it was filmed in Vienna. Now the locale has been entirely changed so that the action takes place in America instead of Austria. Michael Hogan, who wrote the adaptations of "Nurse Edith Cavell" and "Rebecca," has actually writen an entirely new play retaining only the basic plot of Walter Reisch's original story.

Snapshots of hollywood collected at random: The pretty dark-eyed girl Rudy Vallee was dancing with at Ciro's was Gail Ambers, Sphinx Club entertainer. One of the nicest features at Ciro's after the preview of "It's A Date" was the showing of Deanna Durbin's earlier pictures. She sang a song from each of her movie hits. What a little girl she was in 1936 and how she has developed. Vaughn Paul was as proud as he could be and held her hand all evening; Kay Francis, seated next to Joe Pasternak, beamed at the reception given her; Liz Whitney and Gene Towne a dinner twosome also at Ciro's; Jeanne Cagney, Jimmie's sister, talks every day to Alex Morison, who is singing in Mexico; Joan Warner, H. B.'s pretty daughter, and Ned Crawford, are pricing wedding rings.

Ethel Butterworth, (the former Mrs. Charlie) and Wright Ludington, Santa Barbara millionaire, have that lovelight in their eyes; Constance Bennett planes in to spend Easter, Marguerite Clark renewing old acquaintances at the cocktail party Rita Lowe gave in her honor. She looks very well.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Top Features Use Style of Travel Films

"And so we say farewell to beautiful Pxtchkolnqrtzy—"

The honeyed somnolent voice of the announcer regretfully brings the travelogue to a close, and the audience howls its merriment. Radio comedians use it for laughs—and get them. Youngsters at "kid" matinees jeer knowlingly. For the much-maligned travel picture today has become an object of mirth.

Curiously, however, Hollywood's producers are making travelogues out of their gigantic productions, or vice versa. For a majority of the "big" releases of recent times show leading characters tramping through miles of scenery, not a whit different from that of the ordinary travel film, except that there are players in the for ground and that things happen.

"Wells Fargo" and "Union Pacific," as well as "Stagecoach," showed travel across early Western plains. "The Grapes of Wrath" is a more modern exodus over the same paths.

"Safari" will display Madeleine Carroll, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and Tullio Carminati tramping over Africa, more or less in the footsteps of "Stanley and Livingston." Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour cruise most of the seven seas in "Road to Singapore," with many a natty shot of tropical isles.

"Green Hell" and "Dr. Cyclops" display expeditions into South America. "Northwest Passage" deals with the historic trek of Rogers' Rangers, and "Drums Along the Mohawk" tells of other journeys and adventures.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, March 21.

WHEN THE BROADWAY entertainers went to Washington to attend the President's dinner to his Cabinet, Cordell Hull began the proceedings by offering a toast to Roosevelt . . . Frances Perkins proposed a toast, to Eleanor and Mrs. James Roosevelt . . . The President then arose, referred to his seven years in office, "in which some of us have grown stouter, and some of us"—he pointed to his head—"have less hair now. But I, too, would like to propose a toast" . . . And while an orchestra began the strains of "My Buddy," the President toasted —"To the memory of Louis Howe."

FERENC MOLNAR saw a rehearsal of his "Liliom" Tuesday, and then went to Sardi's where he was introduced to William Saroyan . . . They discussed the theater, and then Molnar graciously told Saroyan: "You are the greatest American playwright today" . . . Saroyan placed his tongue in his cheek, and answered: "Oh, no, I'm not. Don't forget, there's Shakespeare and Ibsen."

SAROYAN then turned to Tallulah Bankhead, and sighed: "You're the most interesting woman in this country" . . . Miss Bankhead snickered, and told him to go about his genius-business . . . "But Tallulah," a listener cautioned her, "he was paying you a very nice compliment" . . . "I don't want geniuses to pay me compliments," she stated. "It goes to their heads."

MAE WEST is in town secretly, and is at the Hotel Beverly, registered under her sister's name . . . Frank Peabody Hamlin, the socialite travel-agent, retired from his agency and will leave for England on Saturday, to join a British ambulance unit . . . Mayor LaGuardia will leave for Oregon next week, but his first stop will be Washington, to attend the F. B. I. graduation exercises . . . The arrests in the Brooklyn Murder Syndicate cases were announced too soon. That's why detectives are out now scouring the town for witnesses who will supply the corroboration required by law . . . All the ladies' gowns and furs displayed in a $20,000 fashion show this week were bought by an Indian prince here—who likes to wear them.

IRVING BERLIN returned from Nassau, after a long vacation there, and Mrs. Berlin is proud of the tan he has acquired . . . "Doesn't Irving look marvelous?" she asked Sam Behrman. "He looks much better than he's ever looked" . . . "It doesn't fool me," said Behrman. "Underneath that tan is the same old pallor."

WILLIAM C. WHITE, who sold his newest serial to Collier's, tells of a Londoner who for 15 years had been writing a serial-thriller for a London daily . . . When his request for a raise was refused, the serial writer added an episode which left the hero, bound by chains, in a small tank, with the rising water already up to his chin. In that water was an octopus—and the villain stood by, with a machine gun trained on the hero's chest . . . When that instalment was published, the serial writer resigned . . . The frantic editors, unable to find a writer who could get the hero out of this predicament, finally agreed to the salary increase . . . the serial writer returned to his desk, and began the next instalment: "By superhuman efforts, our hero escaped, and . . ."

THE DUCHESS of Leinster, who now is in Palm Beach, is discovering how unimportant are world events considered by the swanky set there . . . The Duchess, listening to every foreign broadcast, heard an announcer report that von Ribbentrop was on his way to see the Pope . . . "How interesting," she told Edna Brokaw. "Von Ribbentrop has an appointment to see the Pope" . . . "About what?" asked Mrs. Brokaw. "A divorce?"

LAST YEAR a film-agent brought a new novel to Eddie Small, the producer, who asked him to relate the plot. The agent did, in great detail. Small told him to leave the book, and promised to read it . . . Two weeks later, he learned that other studios were negotiating for it, and so he bought the movie-rights. He instructed a writer to make a screen-treatment, and she completed that job in six weeks . . . She then read it to Small, who complained that she had omitted the best scenes—and told her some of the scenes which the agent had related . . . But there were no such scenes in the book. Small then phoned the agent—who confessed that he, too, never had read the book . . . But Small produced that movie, "My Son, My Son"—one of the best films of the year.

In Person at the Capitol

OLYMPE BRADNA

The beautiful film player is but one of the group of favorites which columnist Jimmy Fidler is presenting as his "Hollywood Parade of Stars," on the stage of the Capitol Theater for the week beginning this morning. Mary Healy, Helen Mack, Edith Fellows, Michael Whalen and Peter Lind Hayes are the other young celebrities of the group

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

With Mickey Rooney the top theatrical personality in America today, no wonder Twentieth-Century-Fox is doing a right-about-face and building the same way for Shirley Temple. Her next will be a bit from her own life. The story is of a vaudeville family with Jack Oakie and Charlotte Greenwood playing her parents. It's the old plot of the child born on the stage, trouping on the road, and working out her own salvation. And naturally, they'll use some shots from her old pictures, "Stand Up and Cheer," "Stowaway" and "The Littlest Rebel" to show the growing up period, just as Metro did with Mickey Rooney in "Babes in Arms."

HOPPER

And when Shirley is 10 her parents decide she should have a home, so that takes them to a little town in Vermont, where they try to become a part of small-town life. That should, and will be, comedy relief.

And for the first time in Shirley's screen life you'll see her going to church. With Alan Dwan directing, it sounds to me like the road back to the top of the heap for Shirley. No matter what anybody says, she's got what it takes. Which means plenty of talent. . . .

Trips to "Dodge City" and "Virginia City" may be a pain in the neck to youngsters, but they're thrilling memories for old timers. And the "Virginia City" trek will be remembered always by Hobart Bosworth and May Robson. When May appeared after a hectic ride in the patrol wagon from Reno to Virginia City, the crowds yelled, "What would you rather have—love or respect." Then, without waiting for her reply, they yelled out, "Greetings, May old girl . . . You're going strong, Grandma . . . We'd like to have you for a Muzzy . . . And when are you coming back?" So she guesses she'd rather have love 'cause she got no respect.

'Northwest Passage' Remains Second Week at Palace

One of the most virile pictures in many a season, "Northwest Passage" will this morning enter its second week at the Palace Theater.

The predominately masculine cast is headed by Spencer Tracy, thus adding to the plethora of Academy Award winners currently on the local screens. He plays Maj. Robert Rogers, whose heroism in the pre-revolutionary days of 1759 prompted Kenneth Roberts to write one of the more recent best-selling novels. It is Rogers' Rangers who occupy the first book of the novel and the film confines itself to those early exploits.

Starting out 140 strong, Rogers' Rangers undertake a long trek to Canada to avenge the depredations of the Indians who have scalped and slaughtered so many of their fellows. The deadly grind of the impressive hike reveals a picture of American history not before revealed on the screen.

Robert Young, as a political fugitive from Boston who seeks refuge with the Rangers in Rogers' army, has the richest role in his career. Walter Brennan, like Tracy a two-time winner of Academy Awards, has the colorful role of Hunk Marriner, a likeable backwoodsman.

Ruth Hussey, Nat Pendleton, Robert Barrat and Isabel Jewell have other leading roles in the large cast. Filmed in Technicolor, "Northwest Passage" presents a unique setting that is a strikingly natural depiction of the rugged Idaho, where the picture was filmed.

The short subjects continuing at the Palace are a trifle less rugged. Pete Smith presents a novel Intelligence Test, "What's Your I. Q?" and the cartoon comedy is "Pussy Gets the Boots."

Sweet Tooth Wins Starlet Cookies

On the set of the new "Dr. Kildare" Laraine Day is standing beside a tea table, serving to Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres and Charles Waldron. On the table are finger sandwiches and cookies.

Director Harold S. Bucquet has his players rehearse the scene and between lines Miss Day devours several cookies. Quickly the property man replaces them.

Another rehearsal and more cookies disappear. Again they are replaced. A third and fourth rehearsal have the same results—more cookies eaten by Miss Day, more replaced.

Finally Bucquet walks into the scene with a carton of cookies, gives them to Miss Day and says, "Here eat yourself so full of these things that you won't touch another cookie on the set."

So, while Bucquet stood watch, the young actress ate and ate dozens of cookies, until she was sure she would never want to encounter another one.

Then the scene was shot and finished—this time no cookies missing from the tea table.

Nourishing and Appealing Dainties Are Best for Children's Party

Many Edible Items Listed To Promote a Joyous Time

Plain and Sponge Cakes Are Helpful; Recipes Are Given to Give Merriment And Delicacies to All Youthful Guests

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

THERE'S something about a party, whether it's the celebration of a birthday or such a joyous occasion as Easter that always remains treasured in the minds of children. All during Easter Week, the celebrated Easter Bunny is a very busy creature, for he must make sure that every household receives its share of bright colored Easter eggs.

Martha Ellyn

Unbridled with gaiety are the many edible Easter items that may be made or bought. Easter egg colors for dyeing are now made from certified pure food colors approved by the United States Government. If plain bright colored eggs are desired there are dyes for them; if gay prints of Br'er Rabbit, Mamma, Sister, Brother, or Baby Rabbit are wanted, there are decal decorations to make those prints and many others on hard-cooked eggs. These materials used in dyeing eggs may be bought at the 10-cent store and are very easy to use.

Pleasure Is the Aim

Children's parties should aim to give pleasure without an aftermath of irritation and indigestion. Edible ideas for children's Easter parties may be developed in the form of sandwiches, cakes and cookies and ice cream. Open sandwiches such as peanut butter ones in the shape of rabbits or chickens, and cream cheese and jelly sandwiches, with an orange eggnog, a wholesome cake with a small portion of ice cream not too rich is adequate refreshments for the little one's parties.

Cookies made in the shape of rabbits or chickens will delight children. Recipes for them follow:

Rabbit Cookies — Make round cookies following directions of a favorite cookie recipe suitable for children. With a thin line of brown icing, outline crudedly on the round cookie rabbit's ears, head and eyes, whiskers and two little crouched feet. Maye eyes of tiny pink candies stuck into the cookie, and a mouth of red maraschino cherry pulp shaped in a cupid's bow and pressed into the cookie.

Chicken Cookies — On round cookies made from cookie recipe suitable for children, outline with a thin line of brown icing the head and tail of a little chicken, and its tiny bill. Press in an eye of pink candy and make a little foot of yellow or orange colored icing.

Plain cake, sponge cake and angel food cake are energy foods and therefore wholesome additions to the child's diet. Since cakes are high in fat and sugar, with frosting similar to rich candy, they are best given to very young children only on occasions. Sponge cake with powered sugar dusted over it makes an attractive icing suitable for the young child. The following is a recipe for making it.

Sponge Cake

Sift 1½ cups flour and measure. Resift with 2 teaspoons baking powder, 2 tablespoons cornstarch and ¾ teaspoon salt. Separate yolks from whites of six eggs. Beat whites until foamy. Add ⅛ teaspoon cream of tartar and continue beating until stiff but not dry. Beat the egg yolk and 1½ cups sugar until thick and creamy. Add ¼ cup water. Fold in egg whites, then the flour. Add 1 tablespoon orange juice, folding gently. Bake in an ungreased tube pan in a slow oven, 325 degrees for 50 and 60 minutes. Invert on a wire rack and cool in pan.

Orange eggnog is a nutritious drink that most children enjoy. To make it, beat one egg yolk with ¼ cup orange juice and 2 tablespoons sugar. Pour into a tall glass. Beat the egg white stiff with 1 tablespoon sugar, and fold in ¾ of egg white into the mixture. Add milk to almost fill glass and stir well with spoon. Top drink with remainder of beaten egg white and garnish with grated orange. Makes one serving.

Br'er Rabbit Games

At a Br'er Rabbit party there must be games. A game known as Br'er Rabbit Patch is played in the following manner. Mark off a large square that is known as the Br'er Rabbit Patch. Someone is chosen to be Br'er Rabbit; this child stands in the Patch and shouts the following challenge to the other players.

Don't come into my Briar Patch,
Don't make of it a habit.
If I catch you, little child,
You'll turn into a rabbit!

All the other players dash through the Briar Patch and Br'er Rabbit tries to catch one or more of the players. Those whom he tags must then join hands with him in the Briar Patch, and when the remaining children run through again, they help catch the others. This means, of course, that since all are holding hands in the Briar Patch, there are only two hands in the whole line-up that are free to tag the other players.

Quaker Meeting is another game that may be played. In this game the children are all told to do as their leader does. The leader kneels on both knees. All the other children kneel in a row next to the leader. Then the leader raises one knee—the others follow suit. Then the leader puts one hand on top of his or her head, keeping the other hand in place. Then suddenly he leans hard against the child nearest to him. This topples them all over.

No doubt Mary Lucretia Detwiler and her brother Donald gave whoops of joy when they found Molly Cottontail so dressy in her swank Tyrolean costume; Peter Cottontail with the big long ears, and the basket of bright-colored eggs as they followed the trail into Easterland

Jam Cakes

Jam-coated drop cakes help out the busy housewife as the cakes come out already frosted when they are baked. Cover with thick jam (any kind). Cover with the cake batter and bake in a moderate oven 15 minutes. After 3 or 4 minutes, carefully unmold the little cakes and set, jam sides up, on a cake rack to cool.

Salad Service

It is advisable not to serve salads or sauces that contain vinegar in silver dishes; the vinegar might darken the silver. There would not be any disagreeable taste but the dish would have to be cleaned after each using. Wooden, crockery or china bowls are the best.

Lamb Dishes Take Prizes in Contest

2-Inch-Thick Chops Roasted in Pan Win First Award

The following are the winners in this week's recipe contest.

By The Post Food Editor.

LAMB with its characteristic delicate flavor was found to be a great favorite this week with the Post recipe contestants. Browned juicy roasts, choice tender chops, tempting stews, zestful casseroles and delightful dishes made from left-over lamb were all included in the recipes submitted.

Lamb Roasts
1st Prize, $3
Helen Richter
24 Rhode Island avenue northeast

RECIPE: Have one 2-inch thick loin chop for each serving. Have the butcher roll the chops and wrap each one with bacon and tie them to stay intact. Dust each chop with salt and pepper. Put the chops in a pan and roast, uncovered at 350 degrees for about 50 minutes. Boil potatoes until almost tender but not done. Then drain them and put in pan with chops and finish cooking. Will take about 20 minutes. Turn them as they cook, and they will brown and take up the savory taste from the fat. Salt and pepper potatoes before serving. Add chopped parsley.

For a garnish, use radish rings and mint garnish which is made by putting a glass of mint jelly through a ricer or by breaking with a fork. Fill halves of lemons that have been hollowed out and fluted.

300 Delta Kappa Gamma Delegates Begin Today Discussing Discrimination Against Women

Convention to Open Under Leadership Of Dr. Stroh

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

"Insuring Ourselves Against Discriminations," is the general theme of the eleventh annual convention of Delta Kappa Gamma Society, opening this morning at the Wardman Park Hotel for a two-day session. More than 300 delegates are expected to attend, representing 361 chapters, with a membership of 12,000, in 35 States. Dr. Margaret Stroh, of the faculty of Wilson Teachers College, president of the District society, is convention chairman.

Dr. Maycie K. Southall, professor of elementary education at Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn., president of the organization, arrived by plane Wednesday night, coming on crutches and with one leg in a cast. She is recovering from injuries she suffered in a motor accident early this month.

Dr. Annie Webb Blanton, founder and first president of the society, is here from Austin, Tex., and will be honored at the banquet tomorrow night.

Discussing the convention theme in an interview—a brief noontime talk between committee meetings yesterday—Dr. Blanton said some of the discriminations, but not all of them, were on the basis of sex. Discriminations against women because of their marital status and in the matter of smaller salaries for positions of equal responsibility with those held by men are being studied by the society and will receive attention during the convention. Another is the inequality frequently found in the pay of elementary and high school teachers.

Was Texas' First Woman Official

"The elementary school teacher is of great importance, she gives the child his foundation," said Dr. Blanton. "With equal training, experience and merit, she should receive equal pay with the high school teacher."

Dr. Blanton, who is a teacher in the School of Education of the University of Texas, frequently came to Washington during the years her brother, former Representative Tom Blanton, served in Congress. She was the first woman to hold State office in Texas when she was elected State superintendent of public instruction, an office she held for four years.

Eleven years ago, with the cooperation of 11 friends in the teaching profession, she founded Delta Kappa Gamma. Three other of the founders are there for the convention. They include Miss Mamie Bastian, principal of David Crockett School in Houston; Dr. Cora M. Martin, of the University of Texas, and Miss Lee Williams, an elementary teacher in Dallas.

The society's purpose is to improve teaching standards and conditions for women in the profession. "We look at the schools as established not for the teachers but for the education of children. Our desire is to give the child a better teacher and a better school," said Dr. Blanton, "and all of our endeavors, even those insuring better conditions for the teacher, are fundamentally to improve the school for the child."

In this connection, she cited the teacher tenure law and one to raise requirements for teachers' certificates which the organization is advocating in her State. The retention for an indeterminate period of teachers who are satisfactory is a distinct advantage to the child, she said. The society also was instrumental in the passage, three years ago, of a social security measure for the teachers, providing for retirement at 70.

Yesterday the executive board of the organization met from 2 in the afternoon until late last night, following committee meetings in the morning.

Today, the morning session, at which Dr. Southall will preside, will include reports of officers and State presidents, and the afternoon session, with Grace Agate, of Lousiana, first vice president, presiding, will include discussion groups on "Reducing Unjust Discrimination," with Miss Bastian, Maybelle Bush, Ruth Gunter, Annie Mathews and Edith Joynes as leader.

Dr. Mary Beard, historian and president of the World Center for Women's Archives, will speak tonight at the president's dinner on "Democracy's New Mirror." Miss Margaret Patterson, president of Alpha Chapter here and principal of Fillmore School, is chairman, and Dr. Stroh will preside as toastmistress.

Tomorrow, Miss Mary Leeper, executive secretary of the Association for Childhood Education, will preside at the birthday luncheon to be addressed by Miss Katharine F. Wroot, of the Children's Bureau. A discussion on "Social Implications of Present Day Discriminations Against Women" will be presented by Charl Williams, of the N. E. A.; Frances Speek, of the A. A. U. W.; Mary E. Winslow, of the National Women's Trade Union League, and Dr. Alma Jane Speer, of the American Medical Women's Association.

Senator Hattie Caraway will address the Founders' Day banquet tomorrow night.

AMBITION to follow in the footsteps of Tallulah Bankhead inspires Rosalyn Brown, talented young daughter of Representative and Mrs. Paul Brown, of Georgia, a student at the Greet Dramatic Academy. She will play a prominent part in the play, "Cross Your Heart," to be given Monday night at Pierce Hall. The play is an original one, from the pen of Mildred, codirector of the Greet School.

Rosalyn is not only applying herself diligently to the study of acting, but also is making a noble attempt to modify her fascinating Georgia drawl so as to become a versatile actress.

HERE'S AN IDEA—The other night husbands of members of the Petworth Club had such a good time as guests at the evening program addressed by R. P. Pandia, of Madras, that one of them suggested they might form a man's auxiliary to the club.

It wouldn't be the first in the District. There's the auxiliary to Kappa Beta Pi, international legal fraternity, formed by husbands and brothers, with beaux as associate members. It meets informally during business sessions of the Kappas and adjourns in time to join in the refreshments. Why isn't the men's auxiliary idea a good one?

RADCLIFFE BENEFIT—Mrs. Ellery C. Stowell will entertain at supper on Tuesday evening, after which her guests will attend the Radcliffe benefit performance of two plays being given by the Washington Civic Theater at the Wardman Park Hotel. They are Archibald MacLeish's verse drama "The Fall of the City," and Stephen Vincent Benet's lively character portrait, "The Devil and Daniel Webster."

Mrs. Stowell's guests will include: Chancellor and Mrs. J. M. Gray of American University; Dean and Mrs. Ernest Griffith; Professor and Mrs. Rudolph Clemen; and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Irving Coe.

Mrs. Horace Torbert, 3107 Dumbarton avenue northwest, will entertain at dinner before the benefit. Her guests, friends and members of the Current Topic Club, a group that that met for 40 years, include Miss Mildred Dean, Mrs. Walter Mendenhall, Miss Margaret White, the Misses Stone, Miss H. May Johnson, Miss Kate Buckman, Miss Alice Ballard and Mrs. Mills Dean. Miss Jeanne Simmons, president of the Radcliffe Club of Washington, is also planning a before-the-theater supper.

Florence Kerr Addresses Guild

Mrs. Florence Kerr, assistant commissioner of the Work Projects Administration, addressed the Sibley Memorial Hospital Guild yesterday on the professional and service program of the WPA with special emphasis on its health projects.

Speaking of the contributions WPA has made in the field of child welfare, Mrs. Kerr said: "'One of the largest of these is an indirect contribution—in providing work on public projects for millions of fathers and mothers. We have held countless homes together in times of desperate need by paying WPA wages. It was a decision of the utmost importance to the children of America when we decided to use our unemployed man power in public work for community welfare."

Many women are employed as WPA housekeeping aides, Mrs. Kerr said, and referred to their work as an unusually humane service. "When the mother is ill and the children are consequently neglected, the housekeeping aide takes over. She brings order out of chaos. She is in truth a Good Samaritan to many a distracted household."

Author Addresses D. A. R. On Washington Headquarters

Mrs. Bessie Gahn, author of a book to be issued early next month, entitled "George Washington's Headquarters," yesterday addressed a meeting of the historical research committee of the District D. A. R., at Memorial Continental Hall. She described the book and the sources from which she assembled her information.

Her interest in unearthing the old documents had its inception 10 years ago, when a controversy arose as to the validity of the claim that house at 3049 M street, in Georgetown was the "Suter's Tavern," mentioned by George Washington in his diary. It was from this tavern that he issued his proclamation of March 30, 1791, locating the District of Columbia, and also there that he conferred with Maj. L'Enfant and the surveyor, Andrew Ellicott, while the former was drawing the plans for the Capital City.

This house had been known as Suter's Tavern and, in 1898 a marker so designating it, was placed there by the Children of the American Revolution. In 1929, a bill was introduced in Congress to appropriate money for the preservation of the landmark. It was then, said Mrs. Gahn, that a book was brought to light written in 1856 by Christian Hines, a man of 86, recalling his boyhood. He mentioned "Suter's Tavern" as being on High street, now Wisconsin avenue, and no records were at hand to disprove his statements. So the bill was dropped and the marker removed from the Georgetown house.

In her research, Mrs. Gahn said, she found Mr. Hines had written without records to guide him, depending only on his memory of a distant past. Believing that his memory had erred, she began by tracing, through the court records, Lot No. 3 on which Suter's Tavern was situated. These located it at the Georgetown site, authority accepted by Dr. J. C. Fitzpatrick, who compiled all of Washington's writings and was chief editor of the Bicentennial Commission.

One of the interesting bits of history Mrs. Gahn recounted was about Maj. L'Enfant. After he had drawn the plans for the District, he went to Philadelphia to confer with Washington regarding them. During his absence the Commissioners decided to discharge him, dismissed all of his men; his quarters were pillaged and his records and drawings destroyed. This is told in his diary, which is in the Library of Congress, she said.

Busy Week-End Ahead For Vandenberg Clan

Family Reunion Will Mark 56th Birthday Of Senator; Baileys and Pfeiffers Coming to Capital for Occasion

By Hope Ridings Miller

A FAMILY REUNION and a round of informal fetes are on the calendar for the Arthur H. Vandenberg clan this week-end. After spending several days at the Chalfonte-Haddon Hall in Atlantic City, Mrs. Vandenberg returned to Washington yesterday afternoon.

Arriving today to help Senator Vandenberg celebrate his fifty-sixth birthday will be his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Bailey, jr., who were married here last December. Having spent their honeymoon on a clipper trip that took them all over South America, they will stop here for several days before going on to Battle Creek, Mich., to make their home. Mrs. Bailey's son, John Knight, jr., who has been staying with Senator and Mrs. Vandenberg for the past three months, will accompany his mother and stepfather to Michigan.

Also expected to be here this week-end are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Pfeiffer, the latter of whom is the former Betty Vandenberg. Mrs. Pfeiffer plans to stay here until the middle of next week and will attend the concert of the Civic Orchestra at Constitution Hall on Tuesday. Richard Baldwin, soloist for the event, is one of her friends, and Kurt Hetzel, director of the orchestra, is her former teacher.

From now on until the middle of April, Mrs. Vandenberg has a full calendar. Arriving to visit her next week will be Mrs. Brinton Hall, of Belding, Mich., who will stop here for a few days en route home from Florida.

The Rev. E. A. Thompson, Congregational minister from Grand Rapids, will be a guest of Senator and Mrs. Vandenberg next week-end and will occupy the pulpit of the First Congregational Church here on Sunday, March 31.

MRS. VANDENBERG has cards out for a tea on Saturday, March 30, honoring "The Sublime Shepherdess" and complimenting her biographer, Frances Parkinson Keyes. The book presents the life story of St. Bernadette of Lourdes, and is a companion piece to the author's book, "Written in Heaven," a biography of St. Theresa of Lisieux.

Still another party on Mrs. Vandenberg's calendar of entertainment will be a tea on April 15 for delegates to the D. A. R. convention. Among notables invited to that event is Mrs. Ruth Bryan Rohde, who will be in Washington from April 15 through April 18.

EASTER NOTES: On her way westward to spend the week-end in Albuquerque is Mrs. Francis Biddle, who left here by train on Wednesday for Chicago and will fly from there to New Mexico today. She is going down to spend Easter with her son, Randolph, who is studying at the University of New Mexico. Mrs. Biddle, who writes under her maiden name, Katherine Garrison Chapin, stopped off briefly in Chicago to confer with the editors of Poetry magazine regarding the publication of some of her verse. She expects to return to Washington the second week in April.

Miss Betty Drayton, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles de Vere Drayton, and several of her Smith College classmates, are at the Flamingo Hotel, Miami Beach, Fla., to spend Easter. She arrived there yesterday to join her parents and her sister, Dorothea, who have been there several days and will return to Washington on Monday. Incidentally, the Flamingo Hotel, a favorite stopping place for Washingtonians in Miami, was named by Dr. John Oliver La Gorce, of Washington.

PARTY PATTER: Senator and Mrs. D. Worth Clark entertained at dinner last night. The event was one in a series they are giving this season. Covers were laid for 10. . . . The Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Horinouchi will be guests of honor at a dinner tomorrow night at which Representative and Mrs. William D. Byron will be hosts. Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone have cards out for dinner on April 11. . . . Looks as if the Supreme Court is going in for a siege of entertaining; for Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts will entertain at dinner on April 9, and Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed will give a similar party on April 12. . . . Mrs. Bruce Smith will be hostess at a luncheon today, and again tomorrow. Both parties will take place at the 1925 F Street Club.

Trio Will Have Easter Guest

Hostesses for the week-end will be the Misses Eleanor, Marie and Cecelia Vom Rath, pictured left to right. The daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William Vom Rath will have as their houseguest Miss Marjorie Chadbourne, New York debutante of the past season

Elinor Berry Becomes Bride Of Clark Hill

Bride Is Descendant Of Commodore Berry, Of Berryville, Va.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Berry was the scene of the wedding last evening of their daughter, Miss Elinor Butler Berry, to Clark Daniel Hill. The Rev. Enoch M. Thompson, of Nativity Episcopal Church, officiated, and a reception followed.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white lace and net and carried a colonial bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Vivian Berry, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor, wearing aqua lace and net and carrying a colonial bouquet of Talisman roses. J. Major Shirley was best man.

Mrs. Berry had chosen a gown of blue chiffon with a corsage of pink roses.

After the reception the couple left by plane for New York. The bride is a descendant of Commodore Berry, of Berryville, Va. Mr. Hill is a graduate of Wilson Teachers College and is a student at George Washington University.

Among the wedding guests were Dr. W. Robert Perkins, Dr. and Mrs. Raymond B. Hutchinson, Mrs. Helen G. Kidwell, Mrs. Ella Monk, Miss Freda Egbert, Raymond Berry, jr., brother of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hawkins, of Roanoke, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. John Starns, and Mrs. M. L. Granville, and Mrs. Felix Hawkins, of Alexandria.

Woodring to Stay In D. C. for Easter

Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring, who had hoped by this time to be on his way to join his family in Florida, will not be able to get away from Washington during the Easter holidays.

He expects, however, to join Mrs. Woodring and their three children, Melissa, Marcus and Cooper Coolidge Woodring, some time soon at their cottage in Miami Beach.

Gladys George, Appearing in Play Here, Is Guest of Honor at Arthur Krock Party

ARTHUR KROCK was host Wednesday at an amusing supper party in honor of Gladys George, whose current play, "Lady in Waiting," is at the National Theater this week. Miss George, in a black dinner gown, with a gay little scarlet hat perched on her blond curls, arrived after the show, accompanied by several members of the cast. One of them, a very tall, distinguished looking man, turned out to be Alan Napier, a cousin of Prime Minister Chamberlain.

Mrs. Shaw Parker, just back from Florida, was looking exceptionally pretty in a gold-colored dress with a little embroidered jacket. The Polish Ambassador and our host were trying to persuade Joan Parker to go back to Florida with them to join the vivacious Martha Krock for an Easter reunion at Palm Beach. Martha has gone to Palm Beach with her boys, Billy and Bobby Blair, for the spring vacation.

Attractive Mrs. Thelma Herrick told me that she had only one more sitting to complete the portrait she is doing of lovely Beatrice Phillips and that all concerned are very pleased with the result. It is fortunate that the painting will be finished before Bea sails o Europe on April 6, for over there she will be so busy helping Miss Anne Morgan's work among the evacuees that she won't have a thought for anything else.

CHAUNCEY PARKER, JR., was busily engaged in getting up an impromptu dinner party among the guests for the following night. The dinner was to be for some New York friends and Chauncey had to arrange it without the help of his wife, who is in Bermuda, where Chauncey's father is recovering from pneumonia.

The very interesting Conan-Doyles were at the party, she wearing a fascinating gown of silver sequins. Denis Conan-Doyle is, of course, the son of the famous Sir Arthur Conan-Doyle and has come to the United States to give a series of lectures on the subject on which his father spent so many years of research—life after death. Mrs. Conan-Doyle is a member of the well-known Mdivani family and is a sister of Prince Serge Mdivani, whose widow is the former Louise Van Alen, of Long Island.

Mrs. Sidney Lee, who said that her popular sister, Mrs. Warren Barbour, has quite recovered from her recent illness; John Foster of the British Embassy, Miss Anne Perin, Frank Kent, over from Baltimore, and Winthrop Crane were others enjoying this informal evening.

IT SEEMS THAT ROYALTY has problems just like ordinary mortals. For instance, Archduke Otto of Hapsburg has reservations to return to Europe on the Clipper which leaves April 13. Apparently he's not superstitious so that's not the problem. The hitch is that he resolutely desires to attend the Gridiron Dinner on that same night and can't make up his mind to give up either the sailing or the dinner.

NOTE OF FRUSTRATION DUE TO SPRING THAW: The boys of a famous northern preparatory school were treated to a beautiful movie in color by one of the alumni recently, the subject being winter sports. This school is famous for its ice hockey and after the show some of the boys, rather pathetically, I think, went to the shower-room and played hockey with a piece of soap.

Miss Surratt Is Married At St. Alban's

Becomes Bride Of Rowland Jones, Jr., Of G. W. U. Faculty

In the presence of members of the two families and intimate friends, Miss Geneva Helen Surratt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Prince Pegram Surratt, of Spencer, N. C., was married yesterday afternoon to Rowland Jones, sr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Jones, of Gettysburg, S. Dak. The ceremony took place at St. Alban's Episcopal Church, the Rev. Charles T. Warner, the rector, officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an afternoon frock of navy blue sheer with three-quarter length sleeves and a bodice of matching net with stripes of crepe appliqued from the high neck to the waist. A wide sash, a blue wool hat trimmed with currants, and a shoulder corsage of green orchid's completed her costume.

Miss Mary Jones, of Salisbury, N. C., the maid of honor, had chosen a blue frock, with which she wore a matching veiled hat and a yellow rose shoulder corsage. Dr. Paul Pearson was best man.

The bride's mother, who attended the ceremony, wore a black crepe frock with small hat and a corsage of orchids.

Mrs. Jones is a graduate of the University of North Carolina and a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Beta Gamma Sigma. The bridegroom, an alumnus of the University of Wisconsin, belongs to Phi Kappa Sigma and the National Press Club. He is Washington representative of the National Association of Retail Druggists and is a lecturer at George Washington University.

Morgenthaus Georgia Bound

The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., left Washington last evening for Sea Island, Ga., where they frequently spend their vacations.

They will be joined there by their son, Robert Morris Morgenthau, on his spring vacation from Amhurst and by their daughter, Joan, who attends Miss Madeira's school. Henry Morgenthau 3d, the other Morgenthau son, hopes to join them in Georgia for at least part of their ten-day stay.

Two Clergymen Visiting New York

The Rev. William A. Crowley, of Rutland, Vt., and the Rev. James N. Brown, who are studying at Catholic University, are in New York at the Hotel Commodore.

Over the Easter holidays the Rev. Mr. Crowley will visit his mother, Mrs. Edward Crowley, in Rutland. The Rev. Mr. Brown will spend the week-end in Boston. Both will return to Washington early next week.

About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

Mrs. McLean and Mr. and Mrs. Bliss To Entertain at Luncheons on Easter Day

WITH LENT ALMOST OVER—though not that it makes much difference to social life here in this "black tie" year—many parties are being planned. Easter Day will be marked by two luncheons; Mrs. Edward B. McLean's annual affair at Friendship and that at which Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss will be hosts at Dumbarton Oaks.

Mrs. Samuel Warren will give a dinner on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, which she is occupying while Mrs. Robbins is in Palm Beach. Mrs. Warren has been here several weeks but will return to her home in Boston the end of the month.

SEVERAL DIPLOMATS will head South by motor over the holiday, the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten Ponthoz and the Brazilian Envoy and Senhora de Martins among them. En route back here from Mexico are the Belgian Counselor and Baroness de Gruben and Mr. and Mrs. John Newbold, who have been visiting Count and Countess Roberti.

Mrs. Edward Stotesbury will return to her home on Foxhall road early in April from Palm Beach, where she has been spending the summer. Incidentally, the article on her son, James Cromwell, in this week's Saturday Evening Post, is another example of the amazing Post luck. They scheduled an article on submarines, and the Squalus obligingly sinks; they have a story on Mr. Cromwell and he gets into the headlines just as it appears for his recent outspoken speech in Canada.

CHARLES H. LAURU, financial adviser to the Chinese government, is at the Carlton with Mme. Lauru. A distinguished Frenchman, he and his wife have a beautiful home in Peking and own an old Chinese temple in the western hills. His first wife, the late Juliet Bredon, an Englishwoman, wrote several books about China, including one very successful novel, "Hundred Altars." Mrs. Mason Gulick will entertain at tea for the Laurus on Monday afternoon.

OTHER PARTY NOTES: Mrs. Edwin Meredith will give a dinner April 25 for the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun . . . Lieut. Col. William Shipp has issued invitations for a similar party April 2 in honor of the former American Ambassador to Turkey and Mrs. Robert Skinner. They have a home in Paris and also one in Belfast, Me., where they have been living since the war.

LEOPOLD STOKOWSKI will return to Washington tomorrow to spend the week-end in further consultations about his good-will musical tour to South America this summer. The famous conductor was guest of honor at a party given after his concert at Caregie Hall in New York this week by Senor and Senora Carlos Davila.

The Davilas recently took an apartment which they have done over in attractive modern style, with white furniture and lots of glass tables. That evening Senora Davila had decorated the room with masses of calla lillies. They have been entertaining frequently there this winter, mostly for artists and writers.

Among the guests the other evening were Will Durant, the philosophy-popularizer, and Mrs. Durant, Tony Williams, the New York tailor; Mrs. Williams, formerly Peggy Le Boutillier and George Abell, of Washington. Also there was Tamayo, the well known Mexican painter, who is having a show in New York.

Senor Davila is a former President of Chile and later served as Ambassador here. He is now doing newspaper work in New York.

Mrs. Justin Miller Fetes Mrs. Wallace

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace was guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Justin Miller. The party took place in the hostess' apartment at Wardman Park Hotel, and covers were laid for 12.

In the company were Mrs. Thomas F. Ford, Mrs. Fred Vinson, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, who has just returned from a vacation in Florida; Mrs. Garland Ferguson, Mrs. Harllee Branch and her daughter, Mrs. Donald Leslie, of Atlanta; Mrs. Thomas A. Wadden and her mother, Mrs. Edward Pou; Mrs. Walter Wyatt and Mrs. James Craig Peacock.

Mrs. E. G. Draper To Visit Son

Mrs. Ernest G. Draper, whose husband is a member of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, will leave around April 10 for Charleston, S. C. She will remain there for a week or ten days with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Trowbridge Elliman.

Miss Mary Draper, Mr. Draper's daughter who was presented to society this winter, is vacationing in Sea Island, Ga., for the present. She plans to stop with the Drapers for several days on her way back to Vassar College, where she is attending school.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

R. Henry Norweb, Ambassador to Peru, and Mrs. Norweb will sail today on the Santa Lucia for Lima. They have been in New York at the Biltmore.

The Italian Ambassador and Donna Elly Colonna have returned from a visit to New York, where they stopped at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Suit, Furs, Flower Hat, Called Perfect Easter Outfit

This Ensemble Approved by Mrs. Pemberton, Judge of New York's Fashion Promenade; She Warns of Wearing Too Many Corsages

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

Mrs. Brock Pemberton (above, right), noted stage costume expert, leads a diffident Jo-Jo, local theatrical canine celebrity, on a pre-Easter stroll. She wears a highly personalized Schiaparelli suit of green and red "horse blanket plaid," with a lively lobster pin. However, for Easter she probably will wear a fresh navy and white costume like the one at left, above. The plain wool suit is by Germaine Monteil, the snow-white flowered felt by John Frederics. The small twin butterfly orchids are flanked by a glittering diamond butterfly.

THE PERFECT Easter costume, whether the weather be fair or foul, will include a navy or black suit, furs, and a small flower-garden hat—but a dearth of fresh flowers—according to an authority on fashions and Easter parades. She is no less a specialist than Margaret Pemberton who serves every year as judge of the famous New York Easter parade, sponsored for the Stage Relief Fund, at the Sherry Netherlands annual promenade luncheon.

Marshall Adams

Perhaps Margaret Pemberton is better known to theatergoers and style followers as Mrs. Brock Pemberton, wife of the producer of numerous Broadway hits, among them the Washington premiere of "Lady in Waiting," destined for its New York opening next week. As Mrs. Brock Pemberton, the lively style expert is well known through her former costume studio activities at a Fifth avenue store and in Hollywood as R. K. O.'s wardrobe expert. Her business is fashion coordination among players, scenic designers and stars, among them actress Gladys George, whose dramatic style sense is unquestioned.

Promenade Judge

Most relaxing of all fashion assignments however for Mrs. Pemberton is that of annual promenade judge. This she finds amusing because so many of America's celebrities struggle so esperately for the title of "Best Dressed Parader." Come wind, rain or chill, some stout-hearted style leaders still wear their fly-away hats, thin pastels and avalanche of flowers," chuckled Mrs. Pemberton, and asked "Why must they feel they can't take Easter seriously without a half dozen orchilds dripping from their costumes?"

For the benefit of florists and genuine flower lovers, she hinted that one perfect lapel or waistline flower, wisely chosen with color scheme and outfit in mind, is far more flattering than a couple of corsages worn at one time, just because they both arrived on the same day.

Trim Outfits Planned

Mrs. Pemberton reports that the well-groomed New York promenaders are slated to wear trim little black woolen suits or navy topcoats this Sunday, the better to show off their platinas, their lovely blue foxes or beigey white ones streaked with gray and their neat skull caps or flower turbans blending with their fur tones.

"A mere suggestion of white pique or lingerie trim is nice at this time of year but no so much of it that you look like a ship under full sail," cautioned Mrs. Pemberton. This might be remembered as especially true of Lilly Daches' giant white pique "Lillian Russell" hats, which New Yorkers are buying in droves for the Easter parade, but which Mrs. Pemberton forecasts may cause their owners to scurry in pursuit of it the wind sets up a gale this Sunday.

Hint for Egg Beating

Eggs beat up best when allowed to stand 10 minutes in room temperature—about 72 degrees.

Hot Cross Buns Today's Delicacy

Hot Cross Buns really applies to the shape and not the kind of breadstuff. These buns are traditional in England to serve on Good Friday.

Hot Cross Buns

Heat 1 cup milk slightly, measure, pour into a bowl and test temperature to see that it is lukewarm, crumble 1 cake yeast and add to the milk; add ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 egg, ¼ cup butter and 1 2-3 cups flour. Beat to a smooth batter, sift in an additional cup flour and stir slowly to make a smooth dough. Turn out onto 1 cup of sifted flour, add ½ cup currants, knead lightly but use only as much flour as necessary to make a soft dough. Put into an oiled bowl, turn over to oil the top of the dough, let rise until doubled in bulk; knead lightly to distribute air bubbles; let rise a second time, shape into round buns and place on a greased baking sheet, brush tops with beaten egg diluted with 1 tablespoon of water. Score each bun with a knife to make a cross on top, let rise until light, then bake in a preheated oven at 400 degrees, about 15 minutes, depending on their size. Mix powdered sugar and water to a thin paste and frost the cross on each bun.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Mockingly Called 'Snob' and 'Deb No. 1' by Fellow Students, High School Girl Asks How to Be Liked

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a senior in a suburban public high school. As a junior, I was popular and carefree, but now, as a senior, I am labeled, "snobbish," and "local debutante No. 1." Unfortunately, I have lost many of my former chums since people got this impression. I create most of the new fads that are introduced around school, as most of the girls copy my choice of cosmetics, hair styles and clothes.

I am in the most popular set of girls in school and they seem to be the only girls who really like me. I have no trouble in making friends with any of the boys, but it seems that I am the "laughing stock" of all the girls outside my group. I would give absolutely anything to be able to make friends among the 800-odd girls at school, and sometimes I feel so badly that I consider going to private school, except I could never dream of living where there were no boys.

My little sister, now a sophomore at the same school, is following my footsteps. How can I persuade her not to pick a social life, but to stick to a positively natural course?

I succeeded in making the school's varsity basketball team this year. But while I'm performing during a game, I hear various remarks from the sidelines, such as, "our glamour girl," or "come on, deb, make a basket." I am afraid that I am disliked by my teammates as well as by the coach. All my teachers criticize my cosmetics, hair styles and other similar things.

I am very interested in life and have already set my goal, and my present major ambition in life is to make that goal. I am very much in love with the most popular boy in school, and only because of him am I able to keep what friends I have. I would appreciate it more than anything in the world if you could solve my problems, by telling me how to win friends and influence others, rather than lose friends and alienate people. With love,

FRIENDLESS.

High School Students Are Slavish Conformists

DEAR FRIENDLESS: Let me say at the outset that I like your letter, principally because of the blunt honesty of your narrative. You do not hesitate to call a spade a spade—as, for instance, when you submit that you are "very much in love with the most popular boy in school;" BUT that, "only because of him are you able to keep what friends you have." There isn't a single "weasle word" in your entire document, which could never have been written by the average mealy-mouthed candidate for popular acclaim.

I should guess that the headlong candor with which you "call things as you see 'em," plus your utter absorption with "finding yourself"—is what makes you stand out (an object of derision) like a sore thumb from the rank and file of your fellow students. More than any other social group in life, the high school student body, en masse, is a fanatical worshipper of the standard pattern of appearance and behavior.

Let any detached observer stand outside a high school building as classes are dismissed, and watch the hundreds or thousands of students who throng past him. What does he see? A monotone procession of youthful humanity, so identical (for the most part) in costume and conduct that no single personality registers with him. The spectacle is, I regret to say, boring—and one could wish that more students had the courage, enterprise and artistry to be themselves, rather than a pallid copy of a meaningless composite.

Since you are by nature a flamingly honest individualist, I think one might be damaging the mainspring of your dynamic capacity to achieve your successive "goals" in life, if one were to give you a primer of "do's" and "don'ts"—theoretically calculated to help you "win friends and influence people." Remember the old saying, "Try to please everybody and you please nobody."

Accept the fact that you are the exception, not the norm; that you are a pacemaker, not a conformist. Rather than try to win mass popularity with the high school student body in your senior year, face the fact that its current baffled prejudice is mob acknowledgement of your tentatively expressed, unique selfhood. Those qualities of irrepressible difference from the dullards and conformists, which set you apart from the populace in your little high school world today, should, if diligently cultivated and nobly directed—win you a place of great distinction in the world of men and women in the years to come.

Your major personality flaw, to judge from your letter, is lack of a sense of humor—which is to say, a faculty for seeing all things (including oneself and one's achievements) in proper proportion and perspective. Since it appears that you are destined to be somewhat different from your sisters, you must learn to accept the penalties of that difference with humor—with the laughter of the hearty that is invincible armor against skeptical jibes and envious slights. What if the crowd does call, "Come on, deb, make a basket!" If you are sufficiently different from the average high school girl to register as a "deb" or "glamour girl," you have the advantage of that difference; and every advantage is acquired at a price.

The intent of my foregoing remarks is to convince you that it's no crime or handicap to be different from the crowd; that fundamental "difference," intelligently employed, may lead to greatness. And with that fact in mind, turn now to a reading of Dr. Donald Liard's book, "Why We Don't Like People." The book title (as I have said here before) is the author's exquisitely tactful way of saying, "Why people don't like you"—because when dislike exists, usually it is mutual. Dr. Laird (after conducting extensive surveys of collegiate opinion on the subject) tells in his book what makes young persons popular or unpopular with their fellows.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

The Gentler Sex

—By Malvina Lindsay

Good Friday

I

Thank Heaven for all the little things in a woman's life,
That bring temporary surcease from the thoughts of a world
Darkened again at noontide;
For the sweep of a lusty March wind beating full on the face,
With its portent of change (perhaps for the better) for the assuring caress
Of occasional soft little breezes;
for the miracle of green creeping over the lawn,
For the lacy fringes of buds on the trees; for the heartening aroma
Of freshly turned earth; for the first mating call of a bird, giving the assurance
That life will go on; for the lilt and surge of the heart that comes with Spring's Breaking over the landscape.

II

Thank Heaven for trifles of infinite beauty that obtrude themselves
Into a daily regime that is filled with distant, ominous rumblings
Of war, desolation and death;
For the delicate warmth of heliotrope, pink, robin's egg blue
In Easter baskets; for the fresh tender green of new grass and new leaves;
For the youthful vibrant yellow of daffodils; the subtle pinkish lavender
Of hyacinths, the chaste whiteness of Easter lilies, the old ivory of gardenias;
For the gentle misty blue of the sky, the snowy fleeciness
Of scudding clouds; for the cleanness and the fresh bright sparkle
Of a newly born season.

III

Thank Heaven for all the minute joys that momentarily lift the heart
From its concern with what the unleashed strife and hatred of the jungle
May bring tomorrow;
For the eager joy of children making nests for the Easter bunny;
For the thrill and self assurance that come from putting on new vestments
(Standing before the mirror, shed of the drab cocoon, a dazzling stranger)
For the wafted strains of sacred music, the triumphant measures
Of "Old Hundred;" for the surge and rush of crowds, on streets, in stores;
For the gleam of motor cars in the sunshine, for the clear sharp brightness of a world
All bathed in expectation.

IV

Thank Heaven for all the little moments every day throughout the year
That make our pathway easier, that bring to us a fleeting exaltation
To defy our haunting fears;
For the healing and relaxing laugh from someone's idle jesting;
For the warming presence of a friend who walks our pathway;
For the stimulation of a mind that has a touch with cosmic wisdom,
For the kindliness of a passing face, the gracious contact
Of a beautiful spirit; for the ineffable peace of sitting silent
With those we love; and for those rare and mystic moments when we seem to hear
An organ strain of universal music.

Tired Face, Body Means Circulation Is Slow

Hollywood, Calif.—Take the "beauty angle" for relaxation and facial rejuvenation, is the advice of Binnie Barnes, movie actress.

A tired face means a tired body and that means that circulation is slow. Whenever Binnie finds herself in this condition she props up her feet higher than her head, puts cream on her face and pads over her eyes, and relaxes for 30 minutes. The "angle" peps up the circulation, makes Binnie's skin and hair tingle with new life and gives her eyes a treatment almost as beneficial as eight hours of dreamless sleep.

Corrective Cream For Dry Skin

Blustery days need not be the despair of those possessing dry skins, for with the right treatment you can ward off scaly, winterworn skin. A corrective cleansing cream is made for cleansing dry and normal skin. It looks like a delectable pink strawberry whip, and has a fresh, fragrant scent. It is the consistency of creamy, whipped butter, yet has a definite body.

First, apply a small quantity to remove makeup, then put on another application of cream. Work it gently into the skin with an upward, outward movement, and a mask-like film forms on the face. As you spread and smooth it into the skin it melts and is readily absorbed by the parched skin. The more weather-worn the complexion, the longer the cream should remain on the face.

Labor Department-Security Appropriations Slash Proposed

Merger of Wage-Hour Administration With Public Contracts Division, Cuts In NLRB Pay Rolls Are Recommended

By Edward Ryan

An economy ax sent splinters flying in a dozen directions through the Labor Department and Federal Security agency in their appropriations bill reported to the House yesterday.

Merger of the Wage-Hour Administration with the Public Contracts Division, heavy cuts in NLRB pay rolls, and an investigation of above-average salaries in other branches were among the measures recommended for paring expenses.

Representative Tarver (Democrat), of Georgia, reported for the committee that combining wage-hour and public contracts work in the Labor Department would result in a considerable saving in salary costs. He suggested a study to see if the merger could be made without change in present laws.

Wage-hour officials, however, deferred study of the plan until they can find ways of readjusting their program to a $1,080,000 cut from their budget estimates, all but $45,000 of it from proposed salary increases. Increase sought for the next fiscal year was $2,611,000, and wage-hour officials, not ready to predict where their expansion program would have to be cut, said they will confer today.

Five Posts Eliminated

The slash eliminated five administrative positions outright and was seen as crippling the division's plan to add some 700 employes in the next months.

Following the Appropriations Committee line, the bill for Labor and Federal Security dropped nearly all funds earmarked for administrative promotions. In some agencies, he committee said, administrators had made "wholesale advances" in salaries, and promoted employes as many as six grades in one year. Limit of promotions was fixed at two grades, and employes who went up faster in 1939, would have their salaries scaled back to the two-grade level under the bill.

The committee advised studying ways to reduce average salaries in the central office of the National Youth Administration, in the Social Security Board's information staff, General Counsel's office, and Bureau of Public Assistance. A $72,000 item for an advisory service to promote Government personnel training was dropped from the Office of Education's appropriation.

Staff Reductions Specified

Reductions throughout the NLRB staff were specified under a $346,000 cut from the current budget proposed by the committee. The board's division of economic research, headed by David Saposs, was dropped from the bill, and the committee advised a $57,000 pay-roll cut in the trial examining division, $33,400 in the legal division, and other reductions in Washington and in the field.

Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, flunked a musical examination cold during appropriation hearings, it was disclosed yesterday.

He read into the Record clippings about Leopold Stokowski's "youth concert" tour to South America, later said he knew nothing about Stokowski.

"I have not the slightest idea who he is or anything about him or about his record," said Taber. "Frankly, I'am not an expert along musical lines."

Aubrey Williams, youth administrator, told the committee that the Government is bearing no cost of Stokowski's tour, but spent $3,500 for auditions to 10,000 young musicians who wanted to go along.

* WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, MARCH 22, 1940 25

All-District Team Loses to D. & H., 43-28

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 21.—We don't know what the boys in the back room will have, but we'll take George Case as the most ideally aggressive ball player on a Washington team that isn't exactly brimming with fire.

POVICH

It isn't an original thought. We are merely subscribing pretty completely to a surprisingly frank appraisal of the ball-playing temperaments of the Washington athletes by one in a position to know. Today we were fortunate enough to persuade our interviewee to indulge in some spade-calling. He said: "The fellow on this Washington team you've got to admire most is George Case. He'll fight harder for every inch of success than any other man on the club. One of the reasons he is a good ball player is because he hates to lose. Watch him dig in up to the plate when the count is against him. He scowls at the pitcher and challenges him to get one close.

"Case isn't a great hitter, but he's making himself a good one. There's no quit in him. He's smart enough to use all his speed on the bases. He knows he's not a great outfielder, so he charges those ground balls and gets closer to the infield for his throws. When he has a bad day, it doesn't get him down. He's in there the next afternoon full of fury.

"Jimmy Wasdell could be a great asset to this team, but he's his own worst enemy. When he isn't hitting, he broods and gets panicky. He doesn't have much balance. That's a shame, too, because he could be a big help to us. There's only one thing to pray for and that is that Wasdell will get off to a good start this year. If he has a good first month, he's liable to be a ball of fire for us.

"The best student of baseball on this Washington club is Rick Ferrell. He's the smartest. But Rick is inclined to take things too calmly. He's not an inspirational guy. That's his make-up. Rick is capable, but he could never be brilliant. There's not much spark there.

"It's kind of a crime, too, that Jimmy Bloodworth doesn't have that spark. He could have it. But he's a kind of a screwball who seems to lose a lot of his enthusiasm the minute he steps on the field. Off the field he's the big cut-up. He could use some of that spirit out around second base. He's a good hitter, but he could make himself a better hitter if he'd bristle a bit. There's no question about his courage but he plays as if he's in awe and as if he feels he's lucky to be in the big leagues. That's no help.

"This kid Jimmy Pofahl has it. I'll wager that, and I haven't seen him play a half dozen games. But you can't mistake the stuff when you see it. He's smart and he's tough and he's the kind that shows it all the time. He's bound to be a big help in the clutch, both hitting and fielding. Pofahl plays ball like he loves it and that kind is always a big asset.

"Cecil Travis could use some of the aggressiveness of Case and Pofahl. There'd be no telling what a swell ball player he would be then. He's a fine hitter now, but he could scare pitchers out of more hits if he didn't have that dead-pan at the plate. Cece is one of those strong silent guys you have to admire because of his courage. But he doesn't fight for everything that's due him.

"A fellow who does is Gerry Walker. He wants all that's coming to him, but he doesn't have the balance of smarter players. There are times on the field when Walker is a bit on the hare-brained side. He tried to take too much. But that kind is a great asset in the long run. They do a club much more good than harm. Walker is the type that makes his own breaks.

"Buddy Myer was the ideal ball player—four or five years ago. He had everything, skill, fight and spark. But a change has come over Myer. He'll take a third strike now as if he's resigned to it. He's gotten to be philosophical, and the great ball player never is that.

"I'd say the best clutch man on this club is Buddy Lewis, purely because he's a great hitter and possessor of a terrific will to win. When Lewis first came up to the Nats I was afraid he had some of that North Carolina hook-worm in him and might dog it, but he never has. He's a tough article who is in there giving even when he doesn't look any too vicious.

"Dutch Leonard is the soul of courage. He has to be even to attempt to throw that knuckler. No faint-hearted guy could get away with that kind of a pitch. Dutch has the patience that a good pitcher needs, too, and he doesn't think his job is done when he steps off the mound. With a bat in his hand, he's still in there giving, unlike a lot of other pitchers who think they're not supposed to hit.

"Ken Chase doesn't have any great qualities of leadership and he's on the stolid side. But I don't think he knows any fear. In the toughest spot, he's still bearing down with that fast ball. Joe Krakauskas doesn't have Chase's confidence. In a tough spot, he's inclined to get too cautious and ease up with his fast ball. Krakky should realize that he's got to be pouring to win ball games."

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 21.—Bill Terry, Gabby Hartnett, Doc Prothro and one or two other big league managers have formally awarded the 1940 National League pennant to the St. Louis Cardinals. Among those who don't quite subscribe to this generous gift is Ray Blades, the unassuming but daring manager of the Cards. All he says is "We'll be tough."

CONSIDINE

The "we're for the Cards" clique, which includes a pumber of reporters and fans, bases its belief on the fact that the Cards, though limp and lame, cut the 12½ game lead of the Reds to a transparent thickness at the finish wire—and conceivably might have won the pennant if they hadn't collapsed against the Phillies near the tape. The assumption is that they'll finish the job this year.

It's risky reasoning, we think, after looking over the Cards. Of course the Cards of the citrus circuit are a feeble, unwashed looking squad at best, for they have been without the services of Joe Medwick, who is holding out, and four of five of their other regulars, who have been sick. But even at their full strength we can't see where they are the shoo-ins some of the boys have made them. Down here the only thing that looks mid-season about them is their dirty uniforms.

They have a little more power than the Reds, but Curt Davis and Lon Warneke aren't as good as Paul Derringer and Bucky Walters, and defensively the Reds are sharply superior. But here's the real rub: The Cards will come out of their spring trance with only a faint idea of who's who in the infield. Johnny Mize, of course, is a fixture at first—and almost as stationary as one. But the rest of infield is largely composed of Jimmy Brown, a fine young ball player who has been shifted from second to short to third and back again as the training season has gone along. The other two infielders are Stu Martin and Don Gutteridge. Martin runs down like a dollar watch, and Gutteridge never even gets wound up.

To our mind the chances are that the Cards will open up at the seams in pretty much the same manner as they did last year. Because Blades is still around, and Blades stands for an effective, but slightly back-breaking kind of baseball that drives a team up to the edge of the cracking point. Ray believes in squeezing every ounce of power out of his machine. Some times the thing backfires, but one can't scoff at his measures, for he was a successful minor league manager and he brought the Cards up from a sixth place finish in 1938 and made them a terrific contender.

He apparently operates on the premise that if you use all your ball players today it might rain tomorrow and give them a chance to rest. He worked Curt Davis to a hollow frazzle for the first half of last season, and the fellow collapsed and was no good during the dog days. But he came back, working just as lustily, near the end and finished with the imposing work-record of 22 victories and 16 defeats. He changed pichers more often than any two managers in the circuit, keeping his spares as hot as a pistol in the bullpens. Not once during he entire season did the Cards lose a game wherein one pitcher started and finished. Blades' penchant for substituting reached a new high in the heat of the pennant drive when he yanked Medwick out of left field with two outs in the ninth inning, and a strike and a ball on the last batter. He did this, he said, to strengthen the Cards' defense. The replacement was a fleet rookie named King, and Medwick's squawks were heard around the world.

Pitchers who won 89 games last year for the Cards are back with the team, as well as a couple of promising rookies—including Murray Dixon, 156-pounder who won 22 and lost 15 for Houston last year, and Earnest White, who won 16 for the same team. That sounds most encouraging, particularly when one thinks of the power of Medwick, Mize and Slaughter. But there still remains that leaky infield.

The Cards, all in all, look like a fine ball club.. We think they'll stand a lot, with that kind of stoicism symbolized by Pepper Martin, now an every-other-day player. But we also believe that Blades' gruelling system, plus a lack of suitable reserves, plus a holey infield, will drag 'em down to second place again.

Coalmen's Teamwork Is Margin

Exhibition Cage Battle Features A. A. U. Tournament Before Full House

Superior teamwork triumphed over the best efforts of an all-stor club last night when the Delaware & Hudson Coalmen, semifinalists in the District A. A. U. championship tournament, defeated The Post's All-District five, 43-28, before a capacity crowd at Heurich's Gymnasium. The pick of the scholastic players in the section were unable to cope with the passing and shooting of the Middle Atlantic champions who drew away in the closing stages.

In the tournament, the Treasury Department team, raving five former Rockville players in their line-up, gained the finals of the girls' class by downing the Hyattsville sextet, 34-28. In the 145-pound class, the Stewart Brothers Photos won their way into the semifinal round by taking a 46-35 victory from the Art Welders.

Together for First Time

Away from basketball for two weeks and together for the first time, the all-District team put up a creditable exhibition. Orrel Mitchell, Gonzaga's coach, shuffled his players in good fashion but was unable to get a combination that could click consistently. At that, the all-District five would have been much closer at the end had it made a larger percentage of shoots.

D. and H., forced to the limit to hold the school boys safe, used all its players and each broke into the scoring column. Acky Viana led the Coalmen's attack with 10 points. Pickles Walker, Gerald Burns and Tommy Folliard were others prominent in the attack.

Bob Custer, from astern High, and Hymie Perlo, of Roosevelt, made three field goals each for the all-District Club.

Taking the floor with five members of Rockville's 1939 champions, Treasury advanced to the final round where it will meet the Sherwood sextet in next week's title round at the scene of all tourney games, Heurich gym.

Margaret Lanier was dropping field goals from all over the court as the Treasury team led, 7-6, at the first quarter, and 19-15 at halftime.

But the Prince Georges County five, coached by Mrs. Agnes Turner, rallied to close the gap to one point, 25-24, at the end of the third quarter before the rally of the eventual winners boosted their final margin to six points.

Margart Lanier's 23 points led her team's scorers with Marguerite Howard next with 10 and "Jo" Smith accounting for 3. The forwards played without substitution. Miss Butler's 12 points led the losers while Miss Wood had a hand in keeping the suburbanites in the running with a 9 point total.

Golden Terror Beats Plummer In 16 Minutes

Cox Winner in Preliminary; Don Evans Downs Cook

The baffling mystery of "who is the Golden Terror" was dispelled last night at Turner's Arena when the gentleman of the bilious-hued cover-alls pulled his own mask off before a near-capacity house and celebrated same by thrashing Lou Plummer in 15 minutes of the wrestling headliner.

Lou was holding the golden boy over his head for the final coup when the etables were suddenly turned and the Terror came crashing down atop him, Plummer, for the victory.

Three times Plummer had slammed the Terror to the canvas, when he made the mistake of hoisting him up in the air. As Benny Bortnick ripped the Terror's hanos from the ropes, Lou lost his balance and fell, with the Terror following right up.

In the preliminary waltzing, Joe Co xdisposed of Matros Kirenliko in 25 minutes; Don Evans won when Jim Coffield was disqualified after 43 minutes; Tommy O'Toole downed Ed Cook in 13 minutes and Hymie Olson defeated Abe Kaplan in 13 minutes.

Inside Baseball Urged By Harris in Nat Drills

Base Running, Double Steal Stressed By Bucky; Pitchers Work on Holding Runners on Base; Pofahl Infield Leader

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent

Orlando, Fla., March 21.—The Nats went scientific today. In a dead-serious two-hour workout, the Washington players who will be in the regular 1940 line-up were driven through a session of inside baseball by Manager Bucky Harris and his coaches.

Washington's pitchers were drilled relentlessly in the niceties of holding runners close to bases, and Harris himself demonstrated the fine art of base running and the double steal. The Nats' manager who in his playing days was recognized as a smart base runner despite a lack of native speed, ran himself out of breath during the morning practice.

"We've got to play smart baseball," said Harris. "It's going to be our salvation. Our pitching is a question mark and we don't have any big brutes in the batting order to bang out home runs. We've got to offset these handicaps by taking extra bases and squeezing runners around, and that's what I'm determined to do."

Out of the workout, young Jimmy Pofahl emerged with new-found importance as a member of the Nats infield. Manager Harris singled out the rookie shortstop from Minneapolis for special duties with the Nats this season.

Pofahl Keyman of Infield

"Pofahl is going to be a sort of captain of our infield this year," said Harris. "I don't care if he is a rookie, he has more baseball brains than anybody else in our infield setup except Buddy Myer, and Myer doesn't figure to be in there regularly.

"I asked Pofahl today if he'd mind taking charge of our infield on the defense, and he said he didn't. I told him he had authority to call the plays as he saw fit, and I think we're lucky to have him around. He's smart and he's alive out there and he's going to direct our infield."

According to Harris, young Po-

Mrs. Fabyan Is Defeated In Bermuda

Miss Wheeler Wins In Straight Sets; Cooke, McNeil Victors

By the Associated Press

Hamilton, Bermuda, March 21.—Playing brilliant and nearly faultless tennis, Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica, Calif., defeated Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Boston, 10—8, 6—3 today in the finals of the women's singles in the Coral Beach Invitation Tourney.

Mrs. Fabyan appeared off form, although at times she displayed the corner to corner bombardment of which she is capable. But even this periodic show of strength failed to disturb Miss Wheeler, who remained in control of the match throughout with flashing coverage of the court.

In the men's singles Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., and Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, pretournament favorites, won their way to the finals in a pair of gruelling four-set contests.

Cooke triumphed over J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., 6—3, 1—6, 6—2, 6—4, after solving Hall's forehand shots in the hardest stroking game seen in Bermuda this season.

McNeill's conquest was 6—1, 6—2, 5—7, 6—3 over Edward Alloo, of Berkeley, Calif., in a slow game marked by service faults.

Play in mixed doubles started with Cooke and Mrs. Fabyan defeating H. Chaney and Mary Bertles, of Bermuda, 6—1, 6—1, and Frank Froehling, of Chicago, and Millicent Hirsch, of New York, combining to beat Dr. and Mrs. Weir, of Bermuda, 6—2, 5—7, 6—4.

Texas Pro Wins First Major Crown

Snead's Finishing 67 Earns 2d Money; Byron Nelson Third And Revolta Fourth

By the Associated Press

Pinehurst, N. C., March 21.—Ben Hogan, the lad who'd been second in almost everything but never had been first, proved he had the quality that makes champions today when he won the thirty-eighth annual North and South Open Golf Championship with a record 72-hole score of 277.

Eleven shots under par for the famous Pinehurst No. 2 course, the Texas-born professional took down first money of $1,000 in beating Sam Snead by three strokes. Hogan was in front from the time he tied the course record with a 66 the first round, and he wiped out any doubts of his ability to stand up under pressure by being a winner even though he was a front-runner all the way.

The task wasn't made easy for him. An overdose of caution caused Ben to underclub on some of his iron shots this morning. As a result he finished the third round with a 74, two over standard figures, and had lost one shot of the seven-stroke margin he held at 36 holes.

Last to Finish

In the afternoon the going got tougher. Ben, with Clayton Heafner and Johnny Revolta, was in the last threesome of the day. Up ahead of him were Sam Snead and Gene Sarazen, who were tied for second place after 54 holes with 213 strokes, six back of the White Plains pro.

Sarazen faded out of the competitive picture with a closing 75 that pushed him down to a tie for fifth place.

But Snead wasn't wavering. The hard-hitting shotmaker from Shawnee-on-the-Delaware, Pa., turned on the hottest round he'd had to date. Slugging the ball for all he was worth, he came to the eighteenth green and rammed home a 20-foot putt for a 67. That put the pressure squarely on the 140-pound Hogan's shoulders.

But Ben responded nobly. The iron shots that had been dropping just short in the morning were splitting the pin. Those iron shots gave him a 3-foot putt for a birdie on the third hole, a 4-foot putt for another on the fifth, and brought him home in two on the par-5 sixteenth for another birdie.

Needed Par to Win

Since he had bogeyed the eighth, that meant Ben needed only to finish par—par to cut two strokes off the tournament record set by Vic Ghezzi in 1938. That's just the way he did finish. Even on the home green he tried, boldly for a birdie—he missed it by inches—when he

Larger Tax Asked From Ball Clubs

Ohio Official Plans Levy on Franchises; Players' Contracts

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, March 21.—Ohio became baseball's newest 1940 "holdout" today, with Tax Commissioner William S. Evatt demanding a larger "cut" for the State from all the organized clubs within Bucekye borders.

Evatt decreed baseball franchises and player contracts were of real value to the clubs, and, therefore, were subject to a 3-mill annual levy as intnagibles.

"If the baseball clubs want to protest this ruling, it's their privilege," Evatt said. "They may come in here and show cause why they should not pay taxes on their franchises and player contracts, but until they do that, and a different decision is reached, they are subject to the levy."

He declared the levy would be based on the true value of the franchise and players.

Baseball men were uncertain whether the proposed tax would hamper "farm" activities in the State, most of the smaller Ohio teams being financed by major league. The parent club, in the last analysis, probably would be forced to pay the tax.

Cleveland's Indians have a contract pay roll of about $250,000 for this year, and the franchise is believed worth in the neighborhood of $1,000,000, including the ball park.

At Cincinnati Assistant Treasurer W. P. Bramham asked: "How could we tell what any player's contract is worth, or what the franchise is worth?"

Along with the major league clubs, all Ohio members of the Midatlantic League, Toledo and Columbus, of the American Association, and the Ohio State loop are affected by Evatt's ruling.

The Gale Wins In Star Class At Bahamas

By the Associated Press

Nassau, Bahamas, March 21.—The Gale, owned by Harry Nye and representing the southern Lake Michigan fleet, captured the second race today for the international star class championships, but ranked behind John White's Shucks in points earned.

The two tiny sailboats ran a nip-and-tuck race that ended with Gale crossing the finish line with a narrow lead, reversing the result of the first race of the series.

Elapsed time for the Gale was 1:29.53 and points earned totaled 11. White's craft covered the course in 1:31.49, boosting its points to 17.

A Nassau boat, Harry Knowles' Sand Mac, held third place to within 50 yards of the finish line, when a torn sail forced its withdrawal.

The final race will be sailed Sunday.

Plenty of Trouble On Kenwood's Ninth; Traps Guard Green

This is the second in a series of stories on the toughest golf hole at each of the District and vicinity's 19 clubs. The opinions are those of the professionals, and the stories include notes on the course for the season. The final will be a consensus o' opinion on the most difficult of the lot.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

After careful deliberation over a quartet of long, exacting par 4 holes, Professional George Diffenbaugh selected Kenwood's ninth as the most difficult one on the River road course, and his club's contribution to the toughest in this vicinity.

Although measuring only 380 yards from the back tee—and that downhill—George pointed out the narrow opening to the green—some 20 feet—plus the fact that a stray drive catches a trap or may be stymied by a tree makes the wind-up hole on the first nine his candidate.

Sand awaits a hook or slice from the tee and more sand for a push or pull on the second shot, from four well-placed traps. And if the drive is wild enough, giant trees

Game Last Of Regular Season Here

Locals Unbeaten In Last 10 Home Matches; Eagles Hold Series Edge

Already assured of at least a second-place tie in the Eastern Amateur Hockey League, the Washington Eagles will be out to clinch the runner-up berth as the New York Rovers visit Riverside Stadium tonight in the last regularly scheduled game of the season.

The Eagles have not lost on the home ice in the last ten matches, winning eight and tying the other two, and also hold an 8-to-5 edge over the Rovers in the season's series. The Eagles could lose tonight and still gain undisputed possession of second place by beating Atlantic City tomorrow, or should the Rovers lost their final engagement to the Skeeters.

Out in front throughout the early matches and apparently on the way to a title in midseason, the Rovers ran into an extended slump and the Baltimore Orioles swept on to the championship. However, the Rovers broke individual and team scoring marks on the way.

The team boasts a 365-point total, a new record, while Albert Collings is only four goals short of the 100 mark and will be out for the century in tonight's and tomorrow night's games.

Bruce (Bunny) McKilltop, who suffered a slight fracture of the left hand two weeks ago and has been inactive since, may return to the Eagles' line-up tonight, as he was impressive in yesterday's workout.

After completing the road season Sunday in Baltimore, the Eagles will play a three-match postseason series with the Orioles next week.

'Baering Down'

The first question asked by the census man is, "Did you celebrate both Thanksgivings last year?"

If you answer in the affirmative and show two wishbones as proof, you get a diploma. If you send in your passport picture you can get an old age pension when you are still in the Boy Scouts.

The farmers are doing their best with a neat bit of indoor farming in Congress. The weedbenders got another couple of hundred million dollars and a vote of confidence in their ability to spend it.

that also guard the neighboring first and second fairways leave an impossible shot for the green and make a sacrifice shot necessary.

Traps Appear Huge

The opening to the green is actually 20 feet but from your drive, whether playing a four-wood or six-iron, it looks no more than 20 inches and the traps appear to be miniature canyons.

A 5-foot bank over the green leads to nothing but fairway but how to get back up presents the problem of a run-up or pinch, or sometimes a disastrous combination.

If the drive is a little off center, naturally there is no opening and the immediate problem is to fire a second shot over the green-guarding traps and still stick on the slightly banked carpet.

The twelfth hole is now a harder par 4 but April 1 the tee will be moved back some 60 yards and the hole changed to a par 5. The eighteenth is a 465-yard par 4 with out of bounds all the way down to the left, but the green is wide open in front. The second is also a candidate but the green is also open, while the one-shot par 3 sixth is probably the scene of as few pars as the ninth.

Course Par Increased

The par 5 twelfth will increase the course par to 71, while other alterations include moving the fifteenth green to the left, placing an additional trap to the right of the tenth green, to keep balls from rolling on the eleventh tee, and a new and raised sixth tee so the green can be seen from the tee.

Clubhouse improvements include a new ladies' locker room and lounge and enlarged men's downstairs locker space. The club has reached a new peak in popularity this year and a waiting list will soon be in effect as the goal of 400 B-class members is at hand.

Four new tennis courts add to the country club atmosphere, making a total of eight and plus the swimming pool and skeet range.

Andy Bain's golf tournament schedule will feature team matches, one with Quantico certain and others pending, while the club members will stage a two-man team tourney for the first time. Diffenbaugh is working with Bain, Johnny Bergelin and Dr. Frank on various club activities, while the influx of members includes many of the city's best men and women golfers.

Britain's 'Ice Queen' Prefers Farm to Films

Hollywood Holds No Special Attraction For Blond Hazel Franklin, 'Peer' Of Sonja Henie Here for Ice Carnival

By Al Hailey

Comes now a blonde, young ice skating queen, who they say can skate better than Sonja Henie, who Hollywood's talent scouts are following with eyes aglow—and what does she think about it all? She thinks she'd like to buy a farm in England.

This distressing situation came to light yesterday after the young lady in question breezed into town behind a police escort, had a spot of tea at the British Embassy and hastened off to Riverside Stadium to take a couple of whirls around the ice.

She's Hazel Franklin, who once was "stood up" by the King and Queen of England, and who is in our town to take a leading role in the Washington Figure Skating Club's first annual ice carnival, opening tomorrow, for the benefit of Washington's helpless blind.

Tiny, and lovely to behold in all her blue-eyed blondeness Hazel is the sensation of England and continental Europe just now, and recently was given a screen test by Metro-Goldyn-Mayer.

Longs for Own Farm

But Hazel doesn't long for the kleig lights of the film capital, although she's "simply entranced" by America and its ways.

She wants to buy a farm near her home in Bournemouth, England, her mother, Mrs. John Allen Franklin, who, like her daughter, is blonde and vivacious, disclosed. Hazel wants the farm so she can always have horses on hand. She's an ardent horsewoman.

"Give her her horses, a piano and she's perfectly happy," Mrs. Franklin said.

But after all's said and done, Hazel usually can be found gliding gracefully over the ice—despite the fact that she first started skating but four years ago. She's been studying music since age 7.

Her coach, Howard Nicholson, saw her perform first on a chance visit to the Westminster Skating Club in London four years ago. He immediately persuaded her parents to let him coach her, and now he insists she is the petite Norwegian film star's peer on the ice. But just bring that up to Hazel.

Washington Visit Uppermost

"Now that's not a very nice question," the young Miss Franklin smiles. "I don't think I'd like to have anyone boasting of the fact he or she is oh, 'so much better' than someone else."

Her arrival in Washington was uppermost in Hazel's mind at the moment.

"It was great fun speeding through Washington behind those policemen, but we did have competition from some fire wagons," she said in a very British voice. "But we had a very enjoyable English tea at the Embassy."

Miss Franklin was honored at the British Embassy by the Ambassador himself, Lord Lothian.

Hazel's travels hit a new high last spring when she and her mother docked in England on a Wednesday, found a telegram requesting they catch the next boat for Canada to appear in Ottawa at an ice carnival for their Majesties, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth of England.

Breathless with excitement they boarded the Queen Mary two days later. Then the night of the carnival a state dinner was suddenly arranged for the King and Queen.

Show Held Up

"The show was held up for hours, and their Majesties haven't gotten there yet," Mrs. Franklin laughed.

As for the question of Hazel being a better skater than Sonja Henie, Mrs. Franklin doesn't like to commit herself.

"Sonja's much the more experienced skater, and she has a more definite flair for showmanship," Mrs. Franklin said. "But I don't think she'd hardly attampt the difficult program Hazel uses."

It develops that Hazel's skating routine includes steps more difficult than Miss Henie would care to undergo for any length of time.

Hazel has skated before Sweden's crown prince and princess in Stockholm, in Germany and in Switzerland. She met Sonja last spring at a press party in Southampton. The British papers gave her the larger "play," so if it can be avoided now Hazel and Miss Henie never appear at the same time in public.

And in event you want to know what is one of Hazel's most prided possessions since coming to the United States, it's a fan letter from Hollywood's Shirley Temple.

Joe Turner's Jeffra Fight Plans Are Hit

D. C. Boxing Body Backs Parent Group; Miller Contradicts

Promoter Joe Turner's hopes for a return featherweight title match between Joey Archibald and Harry Jeffra received another kick in the teeth yesterday as the District Boxing Commission lent its backing to National Boxing Association demands that Archibald must first meet Scalzo or lose his title.

N. B. A. President Heinie Miller, following up his disagreement with Gen. John J. Phelan, New York Athletic Commission chairman, Tuesday, said the N. B. A. is "fed up" with the boxing picture in New York and is intent upon breaking up Promoter Mike Jacobs' "monopoly."

"Locally, I want the Jeffra bout; nationally, I cannot disagree with the organization of which I am an official," Miller, also District Commission secretary, said.

Turner, now in the midst of a campaign to revive the boxing business, is bringing pressure to outbid Baltimore and Providence for a Jeffra-Archibald rematch.

Continuing his policy of bringing in "new faces," Turner yesterday announced two Eastern featherweights—Matt Perfetti, of New York, and Johnny Marcelline, of Philadelphia, will fight the third eight-rounder on Monday night's card at the W street arena.

Bill McDowell meets Jack Dorval, another newcomer, in the top eight, and Tony Sarullo, a lightweight, faces Jimmy Fantini, of Brooklyn, in the other eight.

Shepherd Nine Starts Work For 16 Games

Play Wilson Teachers Twice; Massanutten Opens Card April 9

Special Dispatch to The Post

Shepherdstown, W. Va., March 21. Numbering veterans in every position but three, the Shepherd College baseball squad began yesterday indoor drills for a schedule that includes 16 games, with the chance of an additional one or two being carded.

The Rams' opening encounter is set for April 9 at home against Massanutten Military Academy, of Woodstock, Va. Though the complete schedule will not be ready for release until the first of the week, Coach John Newcome said pairs of battles on a "here-there" basis had been arranged with Wilson Teachers, of Washington, D. C.; Shippensburg (Pa.) Teachers; Blue Ridge College, of New Windsor, Md., and Frostburg (Md.) Teachers, all along with Massanutten, met last season.

It is understood Elizabethtown (Pa.) College may become a new opponent as well as an independent nine from Hagerstown, Md.

To face this array Coach Newcome has returning eight of the men responsible for 1939's better-than-average season, plus several newcomers, who, though little chance to size them up has been had, are reported to be good prospects.

The team seems to be well fixed for pitchers, with its No. 1 moundsman, Paul Miller, returning in addition to Veterans Twigg and Ambrose, and Freshmen Lally and Simpson. Except for Dirting, the infield remains intact, with Huffman again back at first base, Gainer at second, and Riggleman at third.

Virginia Streams To Get Trout Stock

Special Dispatch to The Post

Winchester, Va., March 21.—Game Warden F. W. Pingley said today that Paddys Run, in Frederick County, and Big Stoney, Little Stoney and Cedar creeks, in Shenandoah County, are being stocked with trout against the opening of the season next month.

About 20 carloads of trout are to be or have been released in Shenandoah County, he said, while a smaller quantity will be released in Frederick. Most of the trout are said to have been brought from Marion, Va.

Mavity New Business Manager at Waynesboro

Waynesboro, Va., March 21.—Robert W. Mavity, director of physical education at Waynesboro High School, has been elected business manager of the Waynesboro Generals baseball team for the 1940 season, it was announced by W. C. Fauber, president of the Waynesboro Athletic Club, following a meeting of the A. C. directors.

The club is now seeking a berth in the Virginia League which at present is composed of Staunton, Harrisonburg, Lynchburg and Salem. Pulaski is being sought as a partner in expanding the loop into a six-team organization.

Table Tennis Group Changes Age Limit

The D. C. Table Tennis Association has changed the age limit in the championship tournament at Teurich's, March 30-31. A junior event will be held for boys who have not reached their seventeenth birthday by April 1. The Houchins Cup will go to the winner.

Entries for the non-championship class, for the occasional and recreational room player are unusually heavy. The women's event is also increasing in interest, with Jane Stauffer defending champion.

'Angel' Meets Cousins 50,000 Years Late

On Fishing

No doubt about it now—the 1940 fishing season is not still to be looked forward to—it is here.

ACKERMAN

The several fine days this week had anglers out everywhere, and they caught fish. More than a few nice strings of catfish, the standby of early anglers in this section, were caught and in addition, the first of the initial run of white perch, also.

Highest up, were the two caught by an angler just under Walker's Point at Joe Fletcher's.

Joe's boats are all painted and in top shape. To be had at the usual buck a day—at New Cut and Canal roads, if you have forgotten, or are new to this section.

For the big cats, shad-guts is what it takes, although a big fat juicy bloodworm is equally acceptable. Not divided however, as is the custom for the white perch.

Milton Gordon, Frank Del Vecchio's foremost addition to a really new fishing tackle department, will have bloodworms available by 7 a. m. Saturday morning. Might not be a bad idea to get your order in early for the demand for this highly perishable fishing necessity is not stable yet, and for that reason the first shipments are gauged by the minimum demand.

Commander James A. Scott, one of our most insistent fisherman, on Wednesday conceived the idea that he might possibly raise a few white perch in Gunston Cove with a fly. And, failing in that, surely a few fat crappie or bream. He failed on all three of those counts, but not on a pair of nice black bass that he immediately returned to the water unharmed. He's down on Nanjemoy Creek now hunting, with a rod. Just a trick the once in awhile angler cannot understand, but what it takes to keep the finished fisherman happy in following the greatest of all outdoor pursuits.

Florida isn't noted for large bluefish in spite of the concentration of great schools along her beaches each winter. Five pounders are better than average, and 10 is just about tops, yet there is an entry in the Ruppert contest of one measuring 30 inches in length and weighing 11¾ pounds. It was caught off Boca Ratone inlet early this month.

Not a hard fish for local anglers to beat, if—we get our run in Chesapeake Bay this summer.

Don't treat this contest as lightly as is the usual custom with local competitions, for this new one pays off with real iron dollars. To date some 27,000 entry blanks have been mailed out. Some slight indication there is more than ordinary interest.

Yes, there is a Santa Claus! This time, not the usual be-whiskered, rotund little gentleman we know so well, but a slim well put-up outdoorsman, who has traveled the world over in search of big game.

In the March issues of both Spur and Field and Stream, there appeared stories of his adventures. He is learning to live over earlier happenings by giving them to others through his pen, but he also continues to follow his greatest loves in nearby fields and waters.

It is for that reason we say there is a Santa Claus—for anglers, because R. J. Totten wants to share his jaunts on Maryland streams with others. He has the car and, everything else needed. Preferably, the company he seeks should not be able to afford a share of the expenses. Call him at Columbia 8329 if you fall in that category.

Nats Drill In Scientific Baseball

Harris Urges Regulars to Work On Base Stealing

fahl has been given authority to call the Nats' infield plays. "He'll tell Jimmy Bloodworth who's going to cover second whenever a base runner is moving, and I'm willing to trust to his judgment. I've seen enough of Pofahl to realize he's a pretty cute sort out there."

Tomorrow the Nats will drill on cutting off throws from the outfield, and relaying the ball to the infield, and in those two phases of play Pofahl will also be the boss of the Nats' infield, Harris said.

Will Relay Outfield Throws

"Jimmy Bloodworth has the strongest throwing arm in our infield and he'll be the man to relay those outfielders' throws," said Harris. "But Pofahl will be backing up the relay and he'll tell Bloodworth where to throw the ball. In effect, he'll be coaching Bloodworth."

Because of Pofahl's none-too-strong arm, the young shortstop will never go into the outfield for a relay, Harris revealed. "Bloodworth and his great arm is the man for that job. The only time Bloodworth won't handle an outfielder's throw is when the ball is hit to dead leftfield. Then Cecil Travis will go out to take the return throw and Pofahl will cover third. He can do that."

Young Sidney Hudson, prize rookie pitcher in the Nats' camp, produced additional ecstasies among the Nats' bosses today during the workout in which the pitchers practiced the art of holding runners close to their bases.

Hudson revealed that he is no green pea on the mound despite his meager Class D experience. In fact, he was totally unbothered by the presence of runners on bases and showed an ability to get off even a quicker throw to second and third bases than Dutch Leonard, hitherto regarded as the champion among the Nats' pitchers at the art of keeping runners close to the bags.

Western Track Team Chosen

By the Associated Press

New York, March 21.—A Western team today was chosen for the 1-mile East-West relay on the Finnish Relief Fund track program which features Taisto Maki, Finland's brilliant runner, March 31, at Madison Square Garden.

The Western combine will be Roy Cochran, of Indiana; Warren Breidenbach, of Michigan; Jack Sulzman, of Ohio State, and Frank Ohl, of Pittsburgh. Cochran, Big Ten quarter-mile champion, will be a starter in the 500-yard special an hour before the relay.

The Eastern team still remains to be chosen.

Detroit Hopes For Cup Game With Chicago

Desire Revenge in 'Semi-Finals' After Americans' Match

By the Associated Press

Detroit, March 21.—Without counting their chickens too early, the Detroit Red Wings nonetheless hoped tonight to play the Chicago Blackhawks in the Stanley cup "semifinals" after the job with the New York Americans is finished.

Leaving for the second game with the Amerks in New York tomorrow night, the Wings gave the impression that a revenge motive figured in their desire that the Hawks beat Toronto for the other semifinal berth.

"We haven't beaten the Hawks this season and at least five of the games saw us beaten by fluke goals and undeserved penalties," Capt. Ebbit Goodfellow said. "Our whole club is anxious to meet and beat the Hawks."

Chicago dropped its opening first round game to Toronto. Detroit won its opener with the Americans and victory tomorrow night would put the Wings in the semifinals. If New York wins, the teams will play the deciding game here Sunday night.

Petworth A. C. Wins Over Warrenton

Special Dispatch to The Post

Warrenton, Va., March 21.—With the score changing hands four times, the Petworth Athletic Club five, from Washington, nosed out Warrenton Athletic Club, 29 to 28, here last night.

Petworth's Mike Limerick made good two foul shots with but five seconds left to play to decide the game. Warrenton's girls triumphed, 30 to 28, over the Veterans' Administration girls, with Julia Drumm, of Veterans, shooting 12 points for high scoring honors.

Homer With Bases Full Beats Reds for Cuban All-Stars

10,000 Cheer 11-7 Victory In Havana

Vander Meer Loses For National League Champs in Cuba; Yankees Blank Bees

By the Associated Press

Havana, March 21.—A home run by Alejandro Crespo, with the bases filled in the sixth inning, provided the Cuban all-stars with an 11-to-7 victory today over the Cincinnati Reds in the first of a three-game exhibition series at Tropical Stadium.

More than 10,000 fans wildly cheered Crespo's feat, a tremendous blow off the servings of Southpaw Johnny Vander Meer.

The National League champions took an early lead, 4-1 by the third inning, but the Cubans belted Paul Derringer hard in the fourth and fifth to go in front and were never caught, even though the Reds rallied three runs in the seventh.

The second game of the series is set for Saturday.

St. Petersburg, March 21.—Bringing their ancient pitching equipment into action for the first time this spring, Charley Ruffing and Lefty Gomez stymied the Boston Bees for six innings today as the New York Yankees scored a 4-to-0 shutout.

Ruffing, usually a slow starter, allowed three singles, but issued no walks and let only one runnner get to second.

RAIN STOPS HUBBELL

Winter Haven, Fla., March 21.—It rained the Giant-Tiger baseball game out in the fourth inning today—but all was sunshine in the camp of Bill Terry's men.

For the "meal ticket"—King Carl Hubbel—blanked the Tigers, fanning four and allowing only two hits in the first three innings.

The Giants were leading, 6 to 0, largely because of home runs by Frank Demaree and Hank Danning, when the rains came.

ANGELS, 5; MACKS, 4

Los Angeles, Calif., March 21.—Homers by Gene Lillard and Lou Novikoff, plus Paul Carpenter's single, gave Los Angeles, of the Pacific Coast League, a 5-to-4 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics today. It was the A's fourth straight defeat.

The A's pounded Lillard for a 4-to-0 lead, but the pitcher turned around in the second inning and hit for the circuit with two on. Novikoff's roundtripper tied the score in the fifth. Carpenter's single, following Donaldson's two-bagger, drove in the winning tally.

RED SOX, 4; CARDS, 2

Sarasota, Fla., March 21.—Four Red Sox hits and four Cardinal errors resulted in 3 runs in the eighth inning today as the Boston American League Club defeated the St. Louis National Leaguers, 4 to 2.

Jack Wilson pitched five innings for the Sox and allowed only three hits. He was followed by long Bill Butland, who, although suffering a stiff arm, yielded one hit.

San Bernardino, Calif., March 21. The peppy Chicago Cubs clawed perspiring Pittsburgh hurlers at will today and easily trimmed the Pirates, 12 to 5, in the final exhibition contest of the training season here.

Rookies William Nicholson, outfielder, and Clyde McCullough, catcher, got home runs; Glen Russell a triple, and three other Cubs made doubles, while Pitchers Charlie Root, Vern Olsen and Tubb were holding the Bucs to eight singles, two by Maurice van Robays.

Hollywood, Fla., March 21.—Scoring 12 runs in bunches of sixes in the sixth and seventh innings the Phillies today outslugged Columbus, of the American Association, to win a ragged game, 17 to 12.

A homer by Dan Litwhiler with one on and Ben Warren's triple with the bases full were among the most telling of the Phils' 23 hits. Columbus banged out a total of 18 safeties and scored six runs in a ninth inning rally off Rookie Pitcher Bob Franks.

In stretching the Browns' winning streak to four games, Coffman allowed but one hit in hurling shutout ball for five innings, while Laabs got a double and two singles in three times at bat.

The Mudhens scored their two runs in the seventh off Roxie Lawson, who had one wild streak and issued three consecutive walks.

Bob Feller's Work Pleases Manager Vitt

Speed Ball Hurler Anxious to Master All Phases of Game

By the Associated Press

Fort Myers, Fla., March 21.—Bob Feller came bouncing through the bright sunlight toward the dugout. He had just finished his hitch as practice pitcher for the Cleveland batters. He was puffing slightly and perspiration dropped from his face and plastered his shirt to his back. But he grinned like a kid on a picnic.

"Feels good to throw with the wind at your back," he said. He took a few gulps of water, beckoned to a catcher, and headed for the bullpen.

Feller was standing with his left side toward the catcher, hands at his chest, head turned to give him an eye-corner view of an imaginary first base. He made a couple of threatening movements with a slight swing of his left shoulder, then abruptly threw the ball to the catcher.

Told to Learn Bunting

"Didn't you ever see him do that before"? Uncle Oz asked. "Say, I could tell you more about that boy. For instance, one day I called the pitchers together and stressed the importance of bunting. I told them they could win a couple more games for themselves during a season if they learned to bunt."

Feller now was pitching with a normal, free motion. The fellow on first apparently had got around, or been caught off the bag.

"Well, Uncle Oz continued, "after the practice Robert came up and asked me if he could have a pitcher for a little while. I said: 'Certainly, but what for?' and he said: 'I want to practice bunting."

Shows Interest

Feller must have been a little wild, or his support was bad, for he had another imaginary runner on the imaginary first base now, and was holding him there with subtle threats. Far out in leftfield a very tall rookie pitcher was shagging flies. Hal Trosky, still woozy from a bump he took in the all-star game, dropped a ball at first base.

"Robert was the only one who showed that much interest," Uncle Oz resumed. "He'll do anything you tell him that he thinks might help him win a couple or more games when he's out there on that mound. They used to steal his glove off. They don't any more."

Which is one reason everybody is predicting another fine year for the All-American kid from the Iowa cornfields. He's about as sure a bet as any pitcher could be before a season started, and if Vitt could be as sure of his other pitchers he'd be making faces at the Yankees right now.

Orlando, Fla., March 21.—Hal Quick, the agile young shortstop called in from Springfield, joined the Nats today . . . He was too late for the afternoon workout . . . Quick has been loafing during the winter at his Chattanooga home . . . He reports that Clark Griffith wrote him a letter last month ordering him to quit playing semipro basketball . . . "I don't know how Mr. Griffith found out about that," said Quick . . . Bucky Harris has revised his estimates of his rookie pitchers following recent exhibitions . . . Originally, Harris had planned to keep Early Wynn, Bucky Jacobs and Almon Williams with the club and send Walter Masterson and Jim Dean to Charlotte, but there is evidence that those plans may be reversed . . . "If Masterson shows me the same stuff his next time out he showed me against Cleveland the other day, we'll keep him with the club," said Harris . . . "And I have an idea that Dean is a better pitcher than Wynn, Jacobs or Williams" . . . The destination of eight Washington rookies is already known . . .

ORTIZ

Infielder Edgar Leip and Outfielder Joe Mellendeck will go to Springfield, Pitcher Bill Kennedy and Third Baseman Louis Minzal will remain here to play with the Nats' Orlando club in the Florida League . . . First Baseman Jack Sanford and Outfielder Roberto Ortiz will go to Charlotte, and the Cubans, George Torres and Arthur Castro will play for the Nats' Orlando farm . . . If the Giants don't want Zeke Bonura, why did they offer him as much as $10,000 to play ball for them this year? . . . Following the 22-5 defeat by Kansas City, Clark Griffith claimed three pitchers whose names appeared on the major league waiver lists, but he has netted none as yet . . . The best throwing arm in the Washington outfield belongs to Reformed Third Baseman Buddy Lewis . . . But there isn't a good throwing arm in the Washington outfield . . . The rookies who have impressed the Nats' bosses most profoundly in the training camp here are Pitcher Sid Hudson and Catcher Jake Early.—POVICH.

Otto Self, District Youth, Earns 2d Tryout in Minors

Reports to Reading Team April 10; Was With Salisbury

Two summers ago a tall, thin-faced youngster approached President Clark Griffith of the Washington ball club for a tryout. This he was given, and Griffith sent him to Joe Cambria at Salisbury the next season.

The youngster, 20-year-old Otto Self, of 3148 Nineteenth street northwest, is from Callio, Va., in Westmoreland County.

Otto stayed with the Class D Salisbury club from April until June of last season.

This year the youngster will report to Reading of the Class B Interstate League. He was asked to come to camp at Edenton, N. C., April 10.

Self is a first baseman, but has played other positions, although he prefers the initial sack. When at Salisbury, Manager "Poke" King, a former big leaguer, tried to convert Self into a pitcher, but abandoned this when the kid showed no aptitude for hurling.

Otto has been keeping in shape by working for The Washington Post circulation department during the past winter., He served as a field trainer for Coy Sparks at Branch 14. The early morning air and exercise, so claims Otto, are a great conditioner.

The Reading club is paying Self's expenses during spring training. If he doesn't make the grade with the team this year, he will be farmed out to Pocomoke City, a Class D team.

Maryland Nine, Lacrossemen Open Season

Baseballers Make Four-Game Trip; Stickmen Play at Home

Maryland University athletes open the spring sports campaign for District colleges tomorrow, the championship lacrosse team entertaining Mount Washington at College Park, while the baseball squad opens a four-game road trip at North Carolina.

The diamonders will leave at noon today for the single game with the Tarheels while a double-header at Duke on Monday and a single game with Virginia on Tuesday is included on the trip.

Sophomore Mark Kelly, at goal, is the only new face in Maryland's starting line-up, the veterans at other positions including Bill Graham, cover-point; Leo Mueller, point; Milton Mulitz, first defense; Jack Mueller, second defense; Bill Cole, center; Jim Heill, second attack; Oscar Navares, first attack; Jordan Sexton, out home, and Bill Bond, in home. Both teams are well stocked with reserves.

Coach Burton Shipley's nine is an unknown quantity at present, but the trip will offer a severe test as the Blue Devils rank at the top of the Nation's college ball clubs year after year, while Carolina and Virginia are reported to have good teams. The infield presents the biggest problem. Tomorrow's probable starting line-up:

Fritz Maisel or Bill England, rightfield; Adam Bengoechea, second base; Newton Cox or Arthur Rudy, first base; Hugh Keller, left field; Dick McHale, third base; Burton Culver, centerfield; Jim Wharton, short; Bob Burns or John Boyda, catcher.

Lefty Earl Springer, Pershing Mondorff and Charley Woodward, vets, and Lefty Leon Vannais, Max Hunt and Arthur Woodward, sophs, give a pretty fair pitching array, but Shipley hasn't decided how he will use them on the trip.

Lehigh Meets Terps, Navy In Lacrosse

Play Maryland Today, Navy Saturday; Only 2 Veterans Missing

Special Dispatch to The Post

Bethlehem, Pa., March 21.—Lehigh University's lacrosse team will open its season with a two-game trip against Maryland opponents; meeting the strong University of Maryland stickmen tomorrow afternoon and the Middies of the United States Naval Academy on Saturday afternoon at Annapolis.

Captained by Graham Delaney, all-Pennsylvania attack player a year ago, the Engineers will have practically the same team which lost to St. John's, of Annapolis, 19-5, and to the Navy, 6-3, last spring. Only two veterans, Dick Tiebout and Alan Grant, who were responsible for the revival of the sport at Lehigh three years tago, will be missing.

Handicapped in practice because of inclement weather conditions, the Brown and White stickmen will start their season without the benefit of a scrimmage session. During the past two weeks, practice has been confined to passing and running only.

Either Doug Paul or Bud Adrian, both seniors, will hold down the center spot. Phil Rodgers, heaviest man on the squad, tipping the scales at 210, will be the Lehigh goalie. Lehigh's defensemen will include Frank Glueck, Jack Keller, Bill Luce, while the attack will consists of Jack Croft, Al Haffenreffer and Bill Archer.

Double B. Wins at Tropical Park Under Jockey Anderson

Given Strong Ride, Gelding Pays $9.90

Night Tide Takes Place by Half Length; Merritt Saddles Winner

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 21.—P. J. McConnell's consistent 8-year-old gelding, Double B., turned in another game effort to win the five and a half furlong fifth race, best offering on the card, here today. Under Irving Anderson's strong handling, the veteran drove up on the outside to score by a neck at $9.90 for $2. W. J. Susini's Night Tide, favorite in the field of better-than-average platers, took the place by a half length. Mrs. H. O. Simmons' Floragina was third. The time was 1:04 4-5.

Bobby Merritt, who had to quit riding late last summer after a spill at Narragansett that broke three small bones in his back, again saddled Double B. Merritt, who hopes to return to the saddle in the spring, became a trainer when he acquired Double B. and Limerick last fall in Maryland. Double B. has won four races for the Newark lad, while Limerick recently graduated from the maiden ranks.

Double B. had to overcome bad racing luck before winning. He was racing in a contending position along the backstretch when he was blocked near the turn. Anderson gradually brought him around horses and the old fellow responded to hard urging from the final turn home, holding Night Tide, a forward factor from the start, safe in the blanket finish. Floragina began slowly and made up considerable ground to nip Peon for the show.

Abanico Stumbles

The first race produced a mishap which, while not serious, gave the spectators a scare. At virtually the exact spot near the quarter pole where three horses tumbled last Saturday, Abanico, while running last in the big field, stumbled and tossed Jockey Al Snyder. However, the boy arose after the first shock disappeared and walked away from the scene of his fall.

Tilaana, the $4.20 for $2 choice in the 6-furlong test, made good by a nose. Calling was second by five lengths, with Geneva Cross third. The favorite raced On Quest into defeat and continued courageously to hold Calling safe in a long drive. The winner had to withstand a claim of foul. It seemed as if Ruperto Donoso, astride the winner, might have bothered the second horse while using his whip in the duel through the stretch, but the stewards decided no foul had been committed.

The gray mare, Chainwick, emerged victorious in the blanket finish of the second race, which saw half of the dozen platers bunched at the wire. White Topper was second, with Lady Sara third. The trio wound up half-lengths apart, Cape Race was a sluggish-running choice.

Chainwick Hangs On

Grand Light and Whisper raced themselves into defeat in the first half mile. Chainwick then charged into a slight lead and held on gamely in a thrilling finish. The mare returned $23.40.

The Wheatley Stable's Ship Biscuit, a son of Hard Tack, the sire of Seabiscuit, was ridden out to score a two-length victory in the fourth race, a mile and 70 yards affair for 3-years-olds. Charlie Durando earned his second straight triumph astride the $3.80 for $2 shot. Dusky Duke headed plowshare for second money.

Ship Biscuit ran into an early lead, opening up daylight. Horses swarmed around him at the head of the stretch and he appeared beaten, but Durando's mount had something in reserve and pulled clear again under urging.

Trade Relapse Attributed to Overoptimism

Canadian Economist Gives Views; Bankers' End Conference

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., March 21.—Dr. F. Cyril James, Canadian economist, expressed the belief at a bankers' conference today that British and French war purchases will stimulate United States business and that "a moderate revival in economic activity seems probable in the immediate future."

Dr. James, principal of McGill University, Montreal, told the bankers attending the final session of the Fifth Federal Reserve District Bond Conference, that "though some further weakening in business may occur this spring as a result of the over-optimism last autumn, that relapse is likely to be no more than a pause in which American business gathers strength to move upwards for the rest of the war."

In view of Governmental controls abroad and regulation in the United States, he added, "I do not expect this boom to be spectacular or violently inflationary. The probabilities suggest something slower and more evenly dispersed."

Dudley H. Mills, president of the Discount Corporation, New York City banking house, expressed the opinion that while "psychological breaks" may be expected in prices of United States bonds from time to time, such breaks should afford investment opportunities as long as the trend of excess reserves of uninvested funds in American banks is upward.

Edward A. Wayne, chief bank examiner of South Carolina, discussed at the morning session the problem of determining the quality of State and municipal bonds. Factors to be considered, he said, included legality of issue, purpose of issue, adequacy and permanence of especially pledged supporting revenues; efficiency of the administrative machinery of the State, trend of debt in relation to the general economic stability of the State, and general attitude of the State toward its debt as evidenced by enacted legislation and by rulings of its courts.

E. Sherman Adams, assistant secretary of the Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co., of New York, discussed bond portfolio statistics and management records. He said the "first function of the bond account should be to assure the safety of the bank," and as a guide to safety he presented a form stressing the importance of the "so-called capital cushion" in determining the extent of a safe investment portfolio.

"This cushion," he explained, "consists of your surplus, undivided profits and reserves, adjusted for net appreciation and depreciation in the bond account."

Cotton Futures Firm in Cautious Preholiday Deals

New York, March 21 (AP).—The approaching Easter holiday fostered an attitude of caution in cotton futures trading today. The tendency in trade quarters was to await Congressional action on the agricultural appropriations bill.

Prices kept generally on the top side in a narrow market although they tended to slip from a fully steady opening. Support from Bombay and Liverpool was about sufficient to maintain an even keel against pressure of New Orleans and professional liquidation and final prices were 3 points lower to 5 higher.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures slipped slightly today in a leveling-off process following the previous session's spurt.

Final prices were 2 to 4 points lower as traders evened up their commitments in preparation for the Easter week-end.

Sales totaled 104 lots: May, 6.73 bid; July, 6.78; September, 6.82; October, 6.80 bid.

Crude oil held steady with 5¾ cents a pound bid in the Southeast and valley. Texas was 5½ to 5⅝ cents nominal, depending on location.

Holiday to Shut Most of World's Markets Today

By the Associated Press

Widespread observance of the Holy Week and the approaching Easter season will close many of the world's markets and financial exchanges for an extended week-end.

Suspension of trading on Good Friday, March 22, will be general in the United States, Canada and Europe. In New York and other trading centers only livestock, dairy products, fruit and vegetable markets will transact business.

Market activity on Holy Saturday, March 23, will be scattered. In addition to usual Saturday closings, cotton markets in New York, New Orleans and Chicago will suspend trading. Also closing the day before Easter are coffee, sugar, cottonseed oil and wool top futures in New York, the Amsterdam Bourse and Buenos Aires grain markets.

Seaboard Air Line Hearing Set Today

Norfolk, Va., March 21 (AP).—The underlying bondholders and protective committee of the Seaboard Air Line Railway will appear before Federal Judge Luther Way tomorrow to object formally to a report of James E. Heath, special master, relating to compensation for the general mortgage trustees and counsel.

A petition objecting to certain portions of the report was filed today by Robert D. Ruffin, Norfolk attorney, representing attorneys for the petitioners.

The petitioners seek to have the court authorize the receivers to make interest payments due on July 1, 1940, in the amount of $224,300, before payment is made for compensation and expenses of the general mortgage trustees and counsel.

The report showed about two-thirds of the year's income was earned in the final three months of the year, in which period the European war and a rush to re-arm at home brought heavy orders for planes. For nine months to September 30 the report disclosed net profit of about $1,513,778, equal to $1.38 a share.

Undelivered orders on January 1 aggregated $49,241,516, compared with $13,903,006 a year earlier.

Profit Taking Erases Gains In Wheat List

Hedges on Loan Grain Are Factor in Late Price Recession

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 21.—Wheat prices were up as much as ¾-cent at one stage today to the best levels since late in February but all of this gain was lost later as the market closed lower under pressure of profit taking and hedges on loan grain coming into commercial trade.

Nervous price fluctuations characterized the session. There was a fractional advance at the start due to renewed purchasing based on European developments but this was lost quickly. After midsession the market bulged again and May wheat reached $1.06⅛. In the final hour, however, selling increased and the close was ⅛@⅝ lower than yesterday, with May at $1.05⅝@1.05½ and July $1.03⅜@1.03½.

Diminished corn marketings and higher prices for actual grain reflecting the tightening up of supplies due to the loan program steadied that market. Corn closed unchanged to ⅛ up; May 56⅜@56¾; July, 57½. Oats, ⅝ lower. Rye, ⅛ off to ⅛ up, and lard unchanged to 3 lower.

Aircraft Shares Advance in Dull Pre-Holiday Trading; Bonds Fail to Show Definite Trend

New York, March 21.—With the exception of a brief flurry in aircrafts and activity elsewhere in a few special issues, trading in securities today was dull and uninteresting, typical of preholiday dealings in these days of unpredictable events. Stocks started irregularly higher and some of them extended gains steadily during the morning. In the afternoon, however, the in-and-out trading element shortened lines as a precaution against unforseen incidents over good Friday and quotations dropped back to the starting point.

Air stocks were a trifle higher and rail equipments a little lower at the close. Other divisions showed such narrow changes that the composite average showed a net change for the day of only one-one hundredth point on the upside.

The first hour of share trading saw most action, featured by a block of 5,700 shares of Consolidated Oil at 7¼, off ⅛, and 1,000-share blocks in Curtiss-Wright, Canadian Pacific, Pennsylvania Railroad, Atlas Corporation and Pan American Airways. Consolidated Oil, mentioned frequently in recent weeks as negotiating with the Mexican government for operating privileges and sales rights was one of the 15 most active issues. It was one of the few actives, however, which failed to advance.

Loft at New High

Loft, active leader on 47,500 shares, was at a new high and closed at 31⅞, up 2. United Drug, National Tea, Columbia Gas & Electric and several other issues selling under $10 a share were fractionally higher. Standard Oil Co of California was briskly traded at lower levels.

Of 29 listed stocks which recorded new highs, several were in the Aeronautical section. American Airlines was at a new peak and Eastern equaled its previous top. Douglas turned in a good gain. Sears-Roebuck marked appearance of the company's favorable report with a ⅜ point rise. Steel common went above 56, but dropped back to 55⅝ for a fractional loss.

Johns-Manville gave up a point and lesser losses were turned in by Telephone, Illinois Central and Westinghouse. Most of the railroad shares were in a rut. The contra-seasonal decline in loadings did not bring out any selling of note. Automotives were steady but changes were no larger than in other groups.

Engineering construction awards for the week ended March 21 while 21 per cent ahead of the preceding week were 10 per cent under the index for the like 1939 week. The U. S. Bureau of Labor statistics reported a continued decline in wholesale commodity prices.

Welles Report Awaited

Predictions in informed quarters in Wall street are that important movements in the main body of stocks will, at least, await the return of Mr. Welles from the European scene at which time it is hoped a clearer picture will be obtained of peace, or war, prospects.

Bond Trading Dull

Listed bond trading was dampened today by the impending suspension of business, and price changes were of little consequence. Best grade investment bonds were idle and almost completely unchanged. In the foreign dollar section losses outnumbered gains, owing to the still precarious situation of northern Europe. Speculative bonds in the domestic corporate list showed small movements in either direction. Turnover was $4,410,000.

Long-term United States Treasury issues were up by small fractions on continued buying by larger institutional investors. Guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations were dull. Highest grade corporate loans held to previous levels.

Foreign Issues Lower

Norwegian and Danish bonds drifted downward in the foreign list. German, Australian and Canadian bonds drifted lower. Belgian and Italian loans hardly varied. The Latin-American group also was idle.

Speculative railroad liens reflected merely the usual dullness of a pre-holiday session, with fractional losses more in evidence than gains.

U. S. Railroad Quits Cash Aid To Mexico Unit

Southern Pacific Cites 'Existing Conditions' And Heavy Losses

By the Associated Press

New York, March 21.—The Southern Pacific Co. said today further financial support from the company for its Mexican subsidiary was not justified "under existing conditions."

Reporting the Southern Pacific Railroad Co., of Mexico again operated at a loss in 1939, the parent corporation asserted the outcome of the decision to halt cash advances to meet the deficit depended upon expansion in revenues and "such economies as may be brought about through improvement in efficiency of labor and other costs."

The statement was made in Southern Pacific's annual report, showing a deficit last year of $830,338 for the Mexican unit compared with a 1938 loss of $1,416,518.

The subsidiary operates about 1,330 miles of line in Mexico. Rail circles have discussed the possibility the road may be abandoned entirely or sold to the Mexican government.

A. D. McDonald, president, noted in the report the top company from time to time had made substantial advances to the Mexican subsidiary, with no return, causing directors to cut off cash aid January 1 after studying the situation.

The railroad reported electric traction subsidiaries on the Pacific Coast were seeking to cut deficits by abandoning certain unprofitable lines and substituting buses for electric services.

Directors, it was pointed out, had appropriated out of surplus a reserve of $150,000,000 to meet losses on investments and advances to operating units.

As previously reported, the 1939 net income of the Southern Pacific transportation system amounted to $6,134,574, equal to $1.63 a share on the capital stock, contrasted with a 1938 deficit of $6,829,008.

Inland Steel Files $36,000,000 Issue For Registration

Inland Steel Co. of Chicago filed with the Securities Commission yesterday a registration statement covering $36,000,000 of first mortgage 3 per cent bonds, series F, due April 1, 1961.

The company said that it would use the proceeds toward the redemption at 105 per cent of $35,000,000 of outstanding 3¾ per cent series D bonds. Kuhn, Loeb and Company, of New York was listed as the principal underwriter.

United Biscuit Co. of America, Chicago, filed a registration statement covering $7,000,000 of 3½ per cent debentures due April 1, 1935. The proceeds will be applied, the company said, toward the redemption on May 13 at 105 per cent of $4,400,000 principal amount of 5 per cent debenture bonds, due April 1, 1950, and $1,600,000 to repay on April 12 bank loans of that amount incurred April 15, 1938, and due serially on April 15, 1940, to 1942.

Big Board to Relist McKesson Stock Soon

New York, March 21 (AP).—After nearly 16 months' suspension, stocks of McKesson & Robbins, Inc., drug and liquor firm, will probably be returned to trading in the New York Stock Exchange next week.

The securities were removed from listing on the "Big Board" early in December, 1938, when it was discovered that the company's president, F. Donald Coster, was really Phillip Musica, former convict, and that he had been juggling the firm's accounts. Musica committed suicide.

Since that time, McKesson & Robbins has continued in business under the trusteeship of William J. Wardall and the firm's shares have been traded "over-the-counter." The common stock has recently been priced at around $6 a share and the convertible preferred at about $25. These prices compare with $7.50 for the common and $36.50 for the preferred when the stock exchange suspended dealings.

Noranda Income At $23,722,086

Toronto, March 21.—(Canadian Press)—Noranda Mines, Ltd., reports revenue of $21,813,605 from metal production and $1,908,481 from investments and other sources, a total of $23,722,086 in the year ended December 31, 1939. This compares with a total revenue of $22,560,924 in the previous year.

Expenditures for mining, treatment of ores, custom ore, administration and other items totaled $10,123,507 and depreciation and provision for dominion and provincial taxes absorbed an additional $2,437,318, leaving a net profit of $11,161,260 which was equal to $4.98 a share on the 2,239,772 shares outstanding. In the previous year the net was $9,585,843 or about $4.28 a share.

By the Associated Press

United Biscuit Co.

United Biscuit Co. of America reported net profit for 1939 of $1,093,964, or $2.21 a common share, compared with $1,030,245, or $2.07 a share, in 1938. Oil Producers Protest Boost In Tanker Rates

Barrel Charge Raised From 14 to 64 Cents; War Is Blamed

By the Associated Press

Houston, Tex., March 21.—The Texas oil industry is in the midst of the keenest competition in its history, oil circles report.

The recent reduction of the import duty on South American crude oil, followed by a big hike in oil tanker rates, dealt a stiff blow not only to refiners, but producers as well, oilmen say.

Protests have been lodged in Washington by oilmen from the Southwest, midcontinent and Eastern Seaboard against oil tanker rates. They say tanker rates from Texas ports to the Atlantic Seaboard north of Cape Hatters were raised from 14 cents a barrel last August to 64 cents a barrel at present.

A movement is afoot to demand that the Interstate Commerce Commission take over the regulation of coastwise water freight rates. Rail and pipe line rates already are regulated by the commission.

Shippers from Gulf Coast ports are having to absorb the increase in prices. Usually there has been a sufficient differential between Gulf Coast and Eastern Seaboard prices on oil and its products to absorb prevailing transportation costs.

The situation has resolved into a well-concealed struggle between the few who have tankers and the many who have none. Oilmen attribute the shortage of tankers, which caused the rate increase, to the number of tankers placed in the South American trade and to the European war. The convoy system of the Allies is much slower than regular transportation and calls for twice as many tankers.

Rail Loadings Increase 4.7% During Week

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended March 16 totaled 618,985 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced today. This was an increase of 27,8819 cars or 4.7 per cent above the corresponding week in 1939 and an increase of 78,620 cars or 14.5 per cent above the same week in 1938.

Loading of revenue freight for the week of March 16 was a decrease of 2,012 cars or three-tenths of 1 per cent below the preceding week.

Loading of merchandise less than carload lot freight totaled 147,527 cars, a decrease of 1,764 cars below the preceding week, and a decrease of 4,794 cars below the corresponding week in 1939.

$85,000,000 Voted In Senate for Farm Surplus Program

By the United Press

The Senate yesterday voted to appropriate $85,000,000 for 1941 operations of the Administration's surplus farm commodities disposal program to supplement the $100,000,000 which will be available from customs receipts.

The House had eliminated the item from the agricultural supply bill, but it was restored by the Senate's farmer-minded Appropriations Committee, which boosted the bill's total from $713,000,000, as approved by the House, to $923,000,000.

Passage of the bill had been expected in the Senate before adjournment last night, but the leadership suddenly decided to defer action when Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, offered a highly controversial amendment designed to compensate Louisiana and Florida sugar producers who have planted more than their allotted acreage.

Coal Production Gains

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended March 16 as approximately 8,350,000 net tons. The report of the bituminous coal division of the Department of the Interior shows production of 8,800,000 tons for the week ended March 2, and 8,270,000 for the week ended March 9, 1940.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press

London, March 21.—Formation of a new French cabinet lent firmness to the market today, although trading was light in view of the coming long week-end holiday. Gilt-edged bonds were fractionally higher as were industrials. Oils and kaffirs were steady.

Paris—Rentes climbed on an irregular course today, apparently strengthened by the cabinet change. They closed 40 centimes higher to 10 lower. Domestic equities and Banque de Paris stock advanced.

Amsterdam—American stocks moved irregularly today in a reasonably firm stock market. Trading, however, was so light that trends were undeveloped.

Liverpool—Professional liquidation, which developed on disappointing Alexandria advices, caused declines of 2 to 7 points in cotton futures today. The market showed early steadiness on trade and speculative buying in expectation of increased military demands.

Boston, March 21 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agr.).—Few mills and top makers were showing any interest today in the purchase of domestic wools. The occasional buyers that made inquiries were seeking information on supplies and asking prices for future reference. They were very cautious about making any immediate commitment in raw wools. Asking prices on domestic wools were tending lower.

Morgenthau Shuns 'Tricks' On Debt Limit

Insists Maximum Of 45 Billions Be Lifted Openly

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau yesterday rejected proposals that the stabilization fund or some other device be used to continue heavy Government expenditures and at the same time avoid an increase in the $45,000,000,000 statutory debt limit.

"I certainly am not going to use the stabilization fund or any other trick method to avoid the debt limit," he declared.

"It is strictly up to Congress, and if they vote to spend money which will exceed the limit, it is up to them to do something about the limit."

Reply Seen to Congress

His statement was regarded as an Administration reply to the present tendency in Congress to throw overboard the earlier economy drive and vote appropriations in excess of President Roosevelt's January budget estimates.

The argument has been made in Congress that the Treasury working balance, which Morgenthau feels should be kept at a minimum of $1,000,000,000, could be drawn down below this level to support heavier expenditures for the present without increasing the public debt. Use of money in the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund and silver seigniorage also has been advocated.

Morgenthau said he did not regard the $45,000,000,000 debt limit as "very important."

Calls 50 Billion Safe

"There is no reason," he declared, "wh yit should not be 46, 47 or 48 billions. I would not worry if it were $50,000,000,000.

"But it should be done in an open, legal way by Congress."

He revealed that income tax collections this month were running 31.2 per cent ahead of last year and were "comfortably ahead" of the January budget estimates.

Collections reported, he said, totaled $621,000,000 in the first 20 days of March as compared with $473,000,000 for the corresponding period a year ago.

Ahead of Estimates

If collections reported during the remainder of the month follow last year's pattern, the total will be $653,000,000, more than $90,000,000 in excess of the January budget estimates, it is said.

Despite the good showing, Morgenthau warned that collections throughout the year would not be sufficiently ahead of budget estimates to make unnecessary the $460,000,000 in new taxes recommended by the President.

Morgenthau argued that the stabilization fund should be kept as a "nest egg" against some "unforeseen national emergency."

Curb on Baby Bonds

"In this crazy world," he declared, "the time may come when we will get down on our knees and thank God that we've got this nest egg to use in an emergency."

He announced, meanwhile, that sale of "baby" bonds to trusts, banks, corporations, partnerships and other organizations and groups was being discontinued April 1.

Sale of the bonds will be confined to individuals, as originally intended.

President Ordered To Stay in Bed

President Roosevelt, who has been suffering from a head cold for several days, was put to bed yesterday under orders to "stay there" until he is entirely recovered.

Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, White House physician, revealed the orders. Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early said "nobody is worried, nobody is concerned" over the state of the President's health, adding that McIntire's order was merely to speed the Executive's recovery. The President was visited by Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones and entertained Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York at lunch.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

There was no opportunity to play safe for today's declarer, who found himself at an optimistic three no-trump contract at a recent duplicate game. The safest thing he could do was to try to run with his tricks before the adversaries could run theirs.

Opening lead: ♠ 4

Some declarers ducked the spade opening lead, hoping that West might be leading from the king-queen and they could win with the jack; or, failing this good luck, they hoped to exhaust spades from the East hand. When East won the spade king and immediately shifted to hearts, winning five hearts and a spade trick for down two, they were sadder but wiser bridge players.

Our hero, realizing the awful fate that might overtake him if he let spade trick ride, hopped up with the ace, and played the diamond jack, in a wild hope that East had the queen and he might be able to win four diamond tricks. He was rewarded: East covered the diamond queen, establishing four tricks in the suit, which, together with four clubs and a spade, made up the necessary nine tricks. South made three no trump, making a safety play—of playing recklessly.

Listen! with Slocum

The Capitol Theater moguls poured rich wines and ancient gins yesterday for the sole purpose of introducing their current vaudeville star to the press. It was quite gay, and now the Washington press knows Jimmy Fidler, a gentleman 50,000,000 other Americans know, and occasionally like, because of his broadcasts about Hollywood. In Hollywood everybody knows James, and many with some pain, too. Because he set the unthinkable precedent of suggesting via the wireless and the printed word, that some of our West Coast cinema gods had feet of clay, to say nothing of skulls of stone.

Jimmie Fidler

Occasionally some one of these unvarnished lillies would have the bad taste to shoot somebody's husband. It was always pretty embarrassing for the industry, but the Hollywood press would pour oil on the sizzling waters (pick up that mixed metaphor, Bollingsbrook) and everything would be all right.

Along came Mr. Fidler, a former Marine, and former auto salesman, and a former press agent. When the Hollywood boys or girls did something nicely James rang bells. When they became puffy between the ears James would mention it to them via the privacy of a nation-wide network, with a rebroadcast for the West Coast.

As the result Mr. F. became very unpopular among certain citizens who felt that because of him they were forced to spend their evenings with the wife and kiddies (their own, of course). On the other hand, he became Hollywood's No. 1 columnist and one of radio's big guns.

Another Nero Wolfe Story

BY REX STOUT

OVER MY DEAD BODY

Neya Tormic insisted on having back from Nero Wolfe the paper which Carla Lovchen, her friend, had hidden in one of his books. It had stated that the Princess Donevitch was empowered by her husband to act in his stead in certain important matters. Wolfe, acting in Neya's behalf in the murder case of Percy Ludlow, British secret agent, dragged out the fact that Neya was on a political errand which she expected to be terminated within 24 hours. Wolfe agreed to return the paper the following morning at 11. The girls also insisted that they knew nothing more of Mme. Zorka than that she was a dressmaker. Zorka was the one who had seen Neya place the murder weapon, the col de mort, with a glove in Archie Goodwin's overcoat pocket. But Zorka had disappeared when Wolfe asked Inspector Cramer to fetch her to his office.

Chapter 17

"Tailing may not be necessary. On the other hand it may be, for her protection. Mr. Faber wanted that paper"

"Not only did he want it, he knew where to look for it." I yawned. "And since Carla put it there, did she tell him about it? Or did he learn it from a member of your family?"

"I have no family."

"A daughter is commonly considered to be a member of one's family. In this case it would hardly be too much to say that a daughter is a family." I made my voice grave and respectful. "When I marry her I guess it will be unavoidable for me to call you Dad."

"Archie, I swear by all——"

"And I would be your heir in case you die. I would be the beneficiary on your life insurance. We could play in father and son golf tournaments. Later on you could hold the baby. Babies. When the time comes for the divorce—now what the hell!"

The doorbell was ringing.

AT HALF past one in the morning, with me yawning my head off and an outside errand still to do, the doorbell should ring.

I went to the front and unlocked, leaving the chain bolt on so that the door only opened to a 5-inch crack, and peeed through at the male figure standing there.

"Well?"

"I want to see Nero Wolfe."

"Name, please?"

"Open the door!" He was a bit peremptory.

"Tut tut," I said. "It's after office hours. If you don't like your own name, make up one. But it had better be a good one, at this time of night."

"My name is Donald Barrett."

"Oh. Okay. Hold that pose. I'll be back."

I went to the office and told Wolfe. He opened his eyes, frowned, muttered something, and nodded. I returned to the front and let the nightwalker in, flunkeyed for him, and escorted him to the office. In the bright light he looked handsome and harassed, with his white tie somewhat crooked and his hair disarranged. He blinked at Wolfe and said he was Donald Barrett.

"So I understand. Sit down."

"Thanks." He lodged his sitter on the edge of a chair in a temporary manner. "This is a frightful stink, this thing."

Wolfe's brows went slightly up. "This thing?"

"This—up at Miltan's, Ludlow. It's murder, you know."

"I believe it is. You were among those present."

"Yes, I was, damn it. Of course you got that from this fellow you sent up there."

"Excuse me," Wolfe murmured. "I thought you two had met. Mr. Barrett, this is Mr. Goodwin, my assistant."

"Oh, we met. We spoke a few words. He was guarding the door and I asked him to let a young lady through to keep an important appointment and he wouldn't do it."

Wolfe nodded. "That was Miss Reade"

"Oh? He told you that, too?"

"Mr. Goodwin tells me everything."

"I suppose he would. Naturally. He was damn bullheaded about letting Miss Reade out. He said the worst thing she could do was to leave the place and start the cops looking for her, and then, by God, he gets out himself somehow and starts them looking for him!"

"I know. He goes by whim." Wolfe was sympathetic. "Is that what you came to see me for? To reproach me for Mr. Goodwin's behavior?"

Barrett looked at him suspiciously, but Wolfe's expression was bland. "No," he said, "I just mentioned it. He was damn bullheaded. There was no reason in the world why Miss Reade should have been kept there. As far as I myself was concerned, I was perfectly willing to stand the inconvenience. But I came to see you regarding another . . . well, another angle. This fellow that you sent up there—you sent him to represent Miss Tormic, didn't you?"

"What fellow?"

"Your assistant, damn it!" His head went sidewise in my direction. "Goodwin."

"Yes. I'm not really obtuse, Mr. Barrett, only I like the custom of designating people by their names; it's so handy. Yes, Mr. Goodwin was there in the interest of Miss Tormic."

"That's what he said."

"She agreed, didn't she?"

"Sure. That was all right. But that was about that business of Driscoll's diamonds—the damn fool. What I want to know is, are you still representing her? I mean, in connection with the murder."

"Do you ask that question as a curious friend?"

"Why, I—a friend, yes. It's not just curiosity."

"Well, I am representing Miss Tormic. What moved you besides curiosity?"

"OH, just . . ." He hesitated. He put his hand up to smooth his straggled hair, shifted in his chair, and cleared his throat. "Frankly, just that I'm a little interested in Miss Tormic and I should hate it . . . you know? Such a frightful stink? I only met her a couple of months ago, and I got her and Miss Lovchen their jobs at Miltan's—and I feel some responsibility about that too. She's a stranger in New York, and I wanted to be sure she has proper and competent advice. Of course, if you're representing her . . ."

"I am."

"That ought to settle it."

"Thank you."

"Provided you . . ." He smoothed his hair and cleared his throat again. It was plain that he was having trouble getting the cork out. "Provided you appreciate that it's important that she shouldn't be tangled up in the thing at all. For instance, take that rumor that she was seen putting something in that fellow — in Goodwin's overcoat pocket. If that got to the police it would start a hell of a row. Although I don't believe she did any such thing. I doubt if anybody did." He turned to me. "You ought to know. Did you find anything in your overcoat pocket?"

"Sure." I grinned at him. "Driscoll's diamonds."

"No, damn it——"

"Permit me," Wolfe said brusquely. "If we are in possession of any secrets which we think should remain secret in the interest of Miss Tormic, we certainly aren't going to disclose them. Neither to the police nor to anyone else. Including you, sir. If you came here for information of that kind you may expect a famine."

"I am a friend of Miss Tormic."

"Then you should be glad that she has discreet advisers."

"That's all right. Certainly. But sometimes you fellows like to stand in with the police. You know? And it would be bad if they got hold of that talk about her putting something in Goodwin's pocket. They'd go after her plenty and they'd turn her inside out. It was bad enough that she had been in there fencing with Ludlow, and this would make it ten times worse. I wanted to be sure you appreciate——"

"We do, Mr. Barrett. We haven't much native subtlety, but a long experience has taught us things—for instance, never to toss ammunition to the enemy except under compulsion or in exchange for something better." Wolfe's tone was a soothing purr, which made me wonder when and why he was getting ready to pounce. He went on with it: "By the way, I don't suppose you happened to meet Miss Tormic on your way down here just now?"

"No, I didn't. Why? Where was she?"

"She was here for a little talk. She and her friend, Miss Lovchen. They left shortly before you arrived and I wondered if by any chance you had seen them."

"No."

"Have you had an opportunity to talk this thing over with her in much detail."

"Not much of one. You might say none, really. They questioned the men first up there, and they let me go around 8 o'clock. She was still there. I don't know how long they kept her"

"Indeed. Since you are a sufficiently good friend of hers to bother to come down here, it might be thought that you wouldn't have gone off and left her there."

"I couldn't get at her. The place was full of cops and there was one for everybody. Anyway, that's my business. Meaning it's none of yours. You know?"

"Yes, excuse me. You're quite right." Then Wolfe pounced. As usual, there was no change whatever in his tone as his forefinger traced a tiny circle on the polished mahogany of his chair arm. "But I think you'll have to concede that this is my business: where have you hid Madame Zorka?"

DONALD BARRETT wasn't especially good; not much above the average man when he is suddenly and abruptly faced with a question which he isn't supposed to know the answer to but does. His jaw loosened, his eyes widened, and his breathing stopped. The first two may be the result of innocent surprise, but not the third. But he was fairly quick on the recovery. He stared at Wolfe and made folds in his smooth handsome brow and demanded:

"Where have I hid who?"

"Madame Zorka."

He shook his head. "If it's a joke you'll have to explain it to me. I don't get it."

Wolfe said patiently, "I'll explain it. Madame Zorka phoned here this evening and said she saw Miss Tormic put something in Mr. Goodwin's pocket and she was going to report it to the police immediately."

"The devil she did!"

"Please don't interrupt. It's wasted. Mr. Goodwin persuaded her to postpone informing the police until he could take Miss Tormic to Mme. Zorka's apartment for a discussion of the matter. When he and Miss Tormic arrived some time later, they found the apartment empty, and they learned that Mme. Zorka had departed 15 minutes previously, in a hurry, with a bag and suitcase. Mr. Goodwin then brought Miss Tormic and Miss Lovchen here to see me."

"Well, that——"

"Please. The two young ladies have a talk with me and leave. Soon you arrive. You reveal that you possess knowledge of three facts: that someone says that Miss Tormic was seen putting something in Mr. Goodwin's pocket, that that information has not yet reached the police, and that it has reached me. The first two you might have got hold of in several conceivable ways, but not the third. You couldn't possibly have known that the information had reached me unless Mme. Zorka communicated with you after she phoned here."

BARRETT was standing up, apparently with the idea that it was time to go. "Rubbish," he snorted. "If that's the kind of deduction——"

Wolfe shook his head and his tone got sharp. "I won't have it, sir. I won't spend an hour working it into your skull that I know what I know. Mme. Zorka told you what she had told me. Don't try dodging; you'll only annoy me."

"It would be too damn bad if I annoyed you." He looked and sounded nasty. "What if Zorka did tell me about it? What if that's why I came down here? What's wrong with that?"

"Did she?"

"What if she did?"

"Did she?"

"Yes"

"On the telephone?"

"Yes."

"And you, being a friend of Miss Tormic, saw that the only way to make sure that her story would not reach the police was to hustle her away somewhere—and you somehow persuaded her. Then you thought of the possibility that I might pass it on to the police, and came here to plug that hole. Where is Mme. Zorka, Mr. Barrett?"

"I don't know. I supposed she was at home until you said Goodwin was told she had gone with her bag and suitcase. I'll tell you something. I don't like the way you're handling this and I'm going to tell Miss Tormic so. She ought to have a good lawyer, anyway, and I'll see that she gets one. If she lets you out, how much cash will you take not to peddle this fairy tale to the police about her putting something in Goodwin's pocket?"

I got up and took a step toward him, but Wolfe shook his head at me. "No, Archie. Let me——"

I said, "Excuse me. There are times when you get mad and there are times when I get mad. I'll make a concession. I was going to hit him and then talk, but I'll talk first."

I put my face 14 inches from Barrett's. "You. I am restraining myself. You have implied that this office has a stooling department. What evidence have you got to back that up? Talk like a man whether you are one or not. I warn you I'm mad. Have you got any evidence?"
